'Little Man' Income Tax Threat Spurs Relief Slash

Low Brackets Are Chief New Revenue Source, Surveys Show.

Chiefs Seek Curb On Spending Bills

Roosevelt Is Expected to Cut Down Budget Recommendation.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Administration's drive to hold down appropriations was reinforced yesterday by authoritative studies indicating low-bracket income taxes may be the only alternative if the Government is forced to new tax legislation.

With retrenchment ordered in every Government department, and a thoroughgoing budget revision in progress, Administration leaders were attempting to head off all privately sponsored spending programs in advance of the President's relief message.

Even the new relief appropriations appeared due for a scaling down, possibly with White House assent, as proposals were made for apportioning relief funds among the States on a basis of need, and stricter local accountability for aid to the needy.

Sales Tax Opposed.

Significance was added yesterday to the declaration by Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson that "we have about exhausted the sources of taxation to which the Government is willing and able to resort," by tax studies completed by Treasury officials and experts of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue.

These as yet unofficial findings are reputed to show the field for high-bracket income taxes has about reached the point of diminishing returns, and the new undivided profits tax is placing probably the maximum tax load on the large corporations that efficient administration will bear.

It was reliably learned the Treasury and joint committee studies show only three other major tax alternatives are left to the Government should increased expenditures force further revenue legislation.

One of these, a general sales tax, has been many times opposed, not only by the President, but by such Administration leaders at the Capitol as Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee. Another—an increase in some of the existing excise taxes—would produce only a moderate addition to revenue.

There remains, the tax surveys indicate, a substantial revenue source only in small-bracket incomes, through lowered exemptions and buttressed normal rates. Such a tax bill would hit millions in the lower income groups.

Disliked by Congress.

While Senator Robinson in his recent Senate speech did not specifically mention the new sources that would have to be tapped if a tax bill becomes necessary, observers believe it was implied in his statement. Some members said they would not be surprised if the President more specifically restated the admonition in his budget message next week.

Although Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr., (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and others frequently have proposed lowering exemptions in the low-bracket rates, the plan has never been popular in Congress.

Comparative studies of the British and American income-tax systems have disclosed drastic use of the productive low-income source in England. The British exemption for unmarried taxpayers is only $500. In this country, the unmarried exemption is $1,000. The British allow only $750 to married tax-

How much for Relief?

Congress must settle that question . . . probably before another month goes by. Should the appropriation be reduced again this year? Or should Congress listen to the requests of the U. S. Conference of Mayors and others, urging that relief money be maintained at its present level? In the meantime, what do the American people think about relief expenditures for the coming year?

"Do you believe that the Federal Government should further reduce relief expenditures at this time?"

(Pictures—Pages 4, 20.)

Glamour!

That is what women readers want. Alice Hughes, vivacious young writer whose syndicated column, "A Woman's New York," appears in The Washington Post, told the Nation's editors yesterday.

"Glamour," she said, "is today the most widely used idiom in a woman's vocabulary. It's what a woman craves in contrast to her own inadequate life. Just as men seek adventure, so women covet glamour. It is not merely a synonym for romance. It is more than that. It is romance with a big dose of wish fulfillment.

"Every woman wants to keep young and beautiful, so that she may get what she wants out of life."

If newspapers persist in feeding women readers on features about infant care, about the straightening of teeth, about the salvaging of last night's leftovers, Miss Hughes said, those women are going to seek escape in a movie or a magazine that will give them what they really want—glamour.

Miss Hughes spoke at the opening session of the fifteenth annual convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, held in the auditorium of the National Press Club.

Last night the editors, 100 in number, were guests of President Roosevelt at the White House. They interviewed and were interviewed by the President on a wide range of questions, but, as in other years, the session was off the record.

At the opening session, Marvin H. Creager, of the Milwaukee Journal, president of the A. S. N. E., warned against the "standardization" of newspapers and newspapermen. Prof. Lawrence W. Murphy told of the growth and improvement of schools of journalism, and Vernon Nash urged an endowed journalism foundation to do research and bring about improvement in the newspaper field.

Miss Hughes, in analyzing the interests of her sex, said that women, to begin with, want to look charming so as to get a man; second, they want to look charming so as to hold him, and, third, they want babies.

In a survey three years ago, she said, Anna Steese Richardson found that the three things which most

Marine Board Of 5 Approved In Senate Vote

First Action Will Be to Review Bids on New $14,000,000 Liner.

President Roosevelt's nominations to the permanent five-man Maritime Commission were confirmed by the Senate yesterday, more than nine months after passage of the act creating the commission. A temporary three-man commission has been serving since October 26.

Those whose nominations were confirmed yesterday are Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman, former head of the Securities and Exchange Commission; Edward C. Moran, jr., of Maine; Thomas M. Woodward, of Pennsylvania, and Rear Admirals Henry A. Wiley and Emory S. Land.

Their names were sent to the Senate early in March, but Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), of Alabama, had blocked earlier confirmation, centering his fire on the "labor records" of the two admirals. Despite a hearing, at which labor leaders criticized the two appointees, the Senate Commerce Committee approved all five nominations.

The new commission members planned to plunge immediately into the huge tasks awaiting them. Most imperatively calling for quick action is the awarding of a contract for a new liner to replace the Leviathan, of the United States Lines. Bids were opened April 1 and must be acted on within 30 days in order to obtain the prices listed in the bids.

To Cost $14,000,000.

The new liner will cost $14,000,000 or more, depending upon the design selected.

The commission also must adjust, by June 30, two score ocean mail contracts, replacing them with straight operating subsidies, as provided by the merchant marine act. The temporary commission already has held adjustment hearings on a majority of the contracts and has others scheduled. Several adjustments have been agreed to by commission experts, and the companies but await approval of the commission.

However, the larger long-range program before the commission is the virtual rebuilding of the American merchant marine through direct construction and operating subsidies, based on costs of construc-

U. S. Treasury Boosts Buying Of Own Bonds

Federal Reserve Purchase Also Behind Campaign to Balance Budget.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Indicative of the extent to which the Federal Government has been supporting the hard-pressed United States securities market in recent weeks, the Treasury announced yesterday that during March it purchased for its investment accounts $119,553,000 of its own securities—an amount approximately twice as great as the Treasury has purchased in any previous month since such figures have been made public.

At the same time it was announced that the Federal Reserve banks, acting under the recently announced open market policy, had purchased $28,000,000 of Treasury bonds during the week which ended at the close of business Wednesday. This brought the reserve system's purchases of Government securities to $57,000,000 in the ten days since the new open market policy was inaugurated April 5.

Bills Mature in September.

Earlier in the day, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau revealed he was commencing immediately a new series of $50,000,000 weekly Treasury bill issues to replenish the general fund. This has become necessary as a result of failure of revenue to meet anticipations. But it is not necessarily significant, since the Treasury in the best of times has resorted to such short-term borrowing between income tax payment dates.

The new bills will mature in mid-September. The working balance in the Treasury's general fund has dropped to $858,552,000, whereas Secretary Morgenthau prefers to keep that balance around $1,000,000,000.

Selling of Government securities by commercial banks still continues. During the week which ended Wednesday the banks in New York City affiliated with the Federal Reserve system sold $42,000,000 worth of such securities, while similar banks in Chicago disposed of $28,000,000. Figures regarding holdings of Government securities for banks in other cities as of Wednesday will not be available until Monday.

All of these items are behind the

Jefferson Shrine Debate Here Eclipses Like Fight in St. Louis

Herewith is the fifth of a series of articles discussing the controversy raging over plans to build a memorial to Thomas Jefferson at the Tidal Basin in Potomac Park.

An editorial on this subject, "No Decent Respect," and a cartoon, "In the Name of Jefferson." —Page 8.

By Gerald G. Gross.

The Jefferson Memorial-cherry blossom controversy, which has eclipsed the battle over erection of a monument to the same statesman in St. Louis, last night saw another District organization aligned on the side of the blossoms.

The Federation of Business Men's Associations went on record against "the elimination of the cherry blossoms due to the Jefferson Memorial, or for any other reason."

It was pointed out that the cherry blossoms have a definite commercial value to Washington. One speaker called their destruction a "national calamity." The plan was further described as "pure, unadulterated stupidity," and the memorial itself called "inadequate."

Whereas the Washington project involves the expenditure of no more than $3,000,000, according to provisions made by Congress, the one on the banks of the Mississippi at St. Louis is to be a $30,000,000 job.

And yet, despite the fact that it brought about an election fraud scandal and is still being fought in the courts two years after the program was announced, the St. Louis memorial row has received far less national notice than the present tussle over cherry blossoms, Roman architecture and the Tidal Basin.

Offhand it might seem that there is a peculiar jinx which attaches itself to efforts to build memorials

House Passes Lynch Bill in Fiery Session

Party Lines Are Spit in Stormy Debate Until Nightfall.

Fight on Lynching.

By Russell Smith.

The House yesterday passed without amendment the Gavagan anti-lynching bill, 277 to 119, after passionate debate lasting until after nightfall.

The momentum which the Gavagan bill had gathered in recent weeks was such that in some quarters last night it was predicted a vote may be had on anti-lynching legislation in the Senate.

If such a vote occurs, Speaker Bankhead said yesterday, enactment of the bill into law is assured.

The weight of precedent, however, is heavy against an anti-lynching bill running the gauntlet of Senate filibusters. Every previous bill has been talked to death in that chamber.

This view was further reinforced last night when Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, echoing the phrases used by Southern Democrats in the debate, called the bill "a legitimate descendant of those reconstruction measures which followed the Civil War."

Yesterday's House debate was regarded by many as the first in years to introduce a sense of reality into parliamentary maneuvers, a sense of reality born of sectionalism which split across party lines and was more emotional than political.

House Chamber Tense.

Epithets crackled in a House chamber, tense except for relieving shouts of laughter when some member made a verbal slip or turned briefly from invective to wit.

The bill was termed "a bill to make Harlem safe for Tammany" and called a parellel to reconstruction measures after the Civil War. Friends of the legislation charged "connivance" of public officials in the South in lynchings and predicted Mississippi would never bring to vengeance the slayers in Tuesday's Duck Hill (Miss.) lynching.

Designed to make lynching a Federal offense, the bill would fine or imprison for as much as five years any officer who permitted a prisoner to be taken from him and would make members of a lynching mob subject to from 5 to 25 years imprisonment.

Borah's condemnation of such provisions was as follows:

"At a time when the people in the States are having the greatest success in dealing with the lynching problem, this measure is put forth to place a stigma of condemnation upon all their efforts and brand the people in the States as willfully neglecting their duty.

"The measure is a legitimate descendant of those reconstruction measures which followed the Civil War. It is grounded in the belief that the people are unable and unwilling to cope with the internal affairs of a State. The measure is tainted with the un-American doctrine of punishing the innocent for the acts of the guilty."

Two of the three notable addresses of the day were made by opponents of the legislation, supporters at-

Symphony Drops Outdoor Concerts For This Summer

While the National Symphony Orchestra received enough money in its recent sustaining fund drive to assure another season, it will give no outdoor concerts this summer, Corcoran Thom, president of the orchestra association, announced at an annual meeting of members yesterday.

"It had been the board's hope that our campaign would be so successful that plans could be made for some summer concerts," Thom said. "Because of the results of the campaign, however, it must reluctantly give up the idea of summer concerts, for it feels its first duty is to provide the orchestra for the regular winter season."

With Hans Kindler as conductor the National Symphony inaugurated summer concerts at the Watergate in 1935.

While the recent campaign, which set out to raise $110,000 to sustain next season, netted a total of $85,000, Thom announced the orchestra was closing its fiscal year April 15 without a deficit.

Five members of the board of directors, whose terms expired yesterday were re-elected by unanimous vote. They are Mrs. Reeve Lewis, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Eugene Byrnes, Mrs. Edwin B. Parker and Paul Wilstach.

Coal Inquiry Reveals Cash Paid Sheriff

Operators Underwrote His $160,000 Bonds, Senators Find.

By Sidney Olson.

Eleven coal operators of "bloody" Harlan County underwrote the county sheriff's $160,000 bonds of office, the sheriff reluctantly told the Senate Civil Liberties Committee yesterday. The sheriff thereby saved a $500 bonding fee, he said.

Under the driving questions of Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), Wisconsin, Sheriff Theodore R. Middleton, a plump, sandy-haired man in his middle 30's, disclosed he collected a yearly profit of $2,400 from a $2,500 investment in a company store system.

Middleton, who reported that his only sources of income before he became sheriff in 1934 were three: his monthly salary of $150 as a chief of police; returns from a small dairy farm, and "a few hundred dollars' savings," told La Follette that he "played the market for a while."

"Sold" Holdings to Wife.

Shortly after becoming sheriff, Middleton became for $2,500 a quarter-owner of the Verta Supply Co., which operates a string of company stores in the county, he testified. Later he "sold" the holding to his wife. The stores bring in a yearly dividend of "about $2,400," he said, are the only places, "except for the dry-cleaners," where miners of the Harlan-Wallens Coal Co. can cash their "scrip" at face value. If miners wish cash, a 25 per cent discount is made on the scrip.

Middleton also said he was an incorporator of the Harlan Bourbon & Wine Co., a wholesale liquor firm. Other incorporators were the county judge and the county treasurer, both members of the Coal Operators Association. Anyone wishing a permit to sell retail liquor in the county must get it from the judge or treasurer, he admitted.

Perspires Under Grilling.

Middleton, perspiring freely under the steady grilling of Senators La Follette and Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, answered "I don't know" repeatedly to questions about the staff of deputies.

He admitted he has appointed 379 deputie since 1934, of which all but "seven or eight or nine" were paid directly by the coal companies to act as special guards for company property.

The day before, officials of the United Mine Workers told the committee these deputies had "stifled" all labor organization work for many years, with methods they described as involving "killings, kidnapings, maiming, dynamiting and terrorism."

The mine workers' men also testified that while Middleton had pledged himself to better Harlan County conditions, and had been elected with their support, he "turned out to be the worst article yet" as a sheriff.

"Did Make Promises."

Middleton, asked by LaFollette to make a statement in answer to the charges, said:

"I probably did make quite a few promises. I forgot what they all were. I didn't hold up my hand and swear to give the miners any privileges. I was elected by the people. I guess lots of campaign promises don't get fulfilled."

Middleton admitted he must furnish a yearly bond of $70,000 for his tax-collecting duties, and one of $10,000 for his sheriff's oath to "inforce the law." The sum of $160,000, described as his total bonds, was "put up" by 11 coal company owners, operators and members of the executive committee of the Harlan County Coal Operators Association, he said.

He said he didn't know why he hadn't taken advantage of a recent Kentucky law allowing him to put up surety bonds except that "I saved about $500 each time."

Middleton, termed by LaFollette "a bootlegger," told the committee that he had been jailed for five months for unlawful liquor sales, and added that he had operated a pool room, a grocery and a restaurant, and had worked in a mine at various times.

At the morning session of the committee yesterday, George S. Ward, secretary of the Coal Operators Association, said he purposely kept few records of financial activities of the association, because they expected investigations.

Ward is Republican county committee chairman, and S. J. Dickinson, president of the coal operators,

U. S. Aviation Unit Asks Paris Cancel Atlantic Air Race

Paris, April 15 (U.P.).—The United States National Aeronautic Association tonight asked the International Aeronautic Federation to postpone the "Lindbergh Anniversary" air race from New York to Paris because it was a "suicidal" venture.

The race is scheduled for August. The U. S. N. A. A. asked that it be postponed at least a year.

The American request said the race would not serve a useful purpose. It pointed out that disasters would occur with a score of planes attempting the difficult flight, even though the ships must have two engines and be manned by competent crews. The request arrived along with the entry of Amy Mollison.

'Slow-Down' Begun by Labor To Replace Stay-In Strikes

New Union Maneuver Appears for First Time in Detroit General Motors Division Plant Employing 12,000 Workers.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, April 15.—The "slowdown," a new maneuver, designed to replace the sit-down strike as labor's weapon in its universal drive for betterment, made its appearance today in a Detroit General Motors plant.

Hailed by labor leaders as a strategy for bargaining about which there can be no question of legality—a point that counted against the sit-down—the "slow down" made its debut in the huge Ternstedt Manufacturing Co. plant, a General Motors division, employing 12,000 workers.

Illegal possession of the property of others, or tresspassing, is not involved.

The preview proved effective. Workers went about their tasks as usual, but at greatly reduced speed, and a check at nightfall showed the plant's production had been materially reduced. Chieftains of the labor movement were confident they had found a weapon more effective even than the sit-down.

The "slow down," though new in the 1937 labor picture, was fairly common years ago. Workers in the coal industry staged a number of slow-motion strikes. They would load coal, then proceed to clean it, and in the process unload most of it again.

The technique is believed to have had its inception in China. There "slow downs" have long been known as "walking cow" strikes, because the protesting laborer walks slowly "like a cow walks."

Today's "slow down" here, local union leaders said, was put into effect after the management disregarded a request for a conference as provided by the recent General Motors-United Automobile Workers agreement.

S. E. Skinner, general manager of the factory, denied there was any refusal to negotiate with a union committee and added, "since the General Motors agreement, they have been demanding everything, overnight."

Ed Hall, international vice president of the U. A. W. A., said members of the Ternstedt local had been advised to restore normal production speed at once, pending a new request for negotiations.

The union disclosed today it had arranged to confer with officials of the Packard Motor Car Co. tomorrow afternoon. Written or verbal agreements have been reached by the U. A. W. A. with all major automobile producers except Packard and the Ford Motor Co. No requests have been presented to the Ford company.

Eleven-Justice Plan Is Offered By McCarran

Opposition in Committee Seeks to Present Bill in Worst Form.

Senator Pat McCarran Democrat), Nevada, one of the four men whose votes hold the balance of power in the Senate Judiciary Committee's struggle over the President's court program, left the noncommittal fence yesterday to present an amendment allowing the President a flat increase of two justices on the Supreme Court, instead of six.

McCarran jestingly said of his proposal:

"Eleven's a lucky number."

The bluff Nevadan's amendment to the President's bill gave added point to the growing talk of a two-justice compromise, coupled with a constitutional amendment of the O'Mahoney type, which seeks a two-thirds majority in any court in order to declare a law unconstitutional.

"Last-ditch" opponents of the reorganization bill, however, discussed a proposal involving the following

Gen. Jose Miaja, generalissimo of the loyalist armies on the central front, kept his men in their trenches and calm settled over battlegrounds that were filled with the din of combat only 24 hours ago.

Juliana's 'Sabbath Desecration' Brings Censure of Dutch Press

By the Associated Press.

Amsterdam, The Netherlands, April 15.—Church and secular newspapers today censured Crown Princess Juliana and Prince Bernhard, just returned from their honeymoon, for "desecrating the Sabbath."

One of the newspapers was the Rotterdammer, a strong supporter of Premier Hendricks Colijn, who, however, remained aloof from the storm begun by church publications.

The Rotterdammer, commenting reprovingly on reports that the royal newlyweds traveled and visited places of amusement on Sundays, warned:

"The Christian portion of our people learned with pain and sadness from reports about the princely honeymon of repeated desecrations and failure to observe the Sabbath."

It said the love of Juliana's future subjects "would suffer, if in our midst" she and her husband "should continue to treat the Sunday commands with as little regard as newspaper stories indicate they do now."

The Socialist newspaper Volk asked if the Rotterdammer would prefer the royal couple to be hypocrites.

New Peace Move.

By the Associated Press.

Toronto, April 15.—Premier Mitchell Hepburn tonight called a new General Motors strike peace conference.

Hepburn, blunt-spoken foe of the John L. Lewis labor movement, asked representatives of General Motors of Canada, Ltd., and the 3,700 strikers at the company's Oshawa plant to meet him in his office tomorrow morning.

His announcement came as strikes in Canadian mass production industries spread and Dominion and Ontario provincial governments split over the deadlocked walkout.

The most extensive new walkout, in Montreal, was said by its leaders to involve 5,000 workers. It was called by the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, an affiliate of Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization.

Hepburn issued the invitation for the Oshawa strike negotiations after General Motors officials and officers of the United Automobile Workers agreed in Detroit that the Oshawa strike should be settled in Canada.

Organizer Not Invited.

The invitation went to Harry Carmichael, vice president and general manager of the Canadian company; J. B. Highfield, Oshawa plant manager; C. H. Millard, president of the United Automobile Workers Oshawa local, and J. L. Cohen, counsel for the local.

Hugh Thompson, organizer for the United Automobile Workers in charge of the strike, was not invited. Hepburn, calling him one of Lewis' "foreign agitators," refused to meet him when he appeared at a peace conference last Saturday. Negotiations collapsed as a result.

The company was willing to draw up an agreement with a committee of local union members, but refused to sign with the international unions. Hepburn took up the company's cause.

The Montreal garment workers walked out for pay increases and union recognition while pickets at the strike-closed General Motors plant at Oshawa, striking for the same objectives, patrolled in a cold rain.

Ask 44-Hour Week.

Two groups of longshoremen quit for higher wages at Hamilton, Ontario, on the first day of Great Lakes navigation, and 1,000 miners, C. I. O. members, threatened to strike at Fernie, British Columbia, for wage increases and union recognition.

Bernard Shane, organizer in charge of the Montreal strike, said it was "the most peaceful walkout in history," and predicted quick victory for the union demands for a 44-hour week, $14-a-week minimum wage and an agreement with the union.

Sympathy strikes among garment workers in Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver were delayed, union leaders said, because they felt the Montreal strike would be settled speedily.

Premier Hepburn, opposing Lewis and the C. I. O., attacked the federal government's "vacillating policy" in the Oshawa issue, and declared the

Germany Held Responsible in BlackTom Case

U. S. Agent Files Claim for $20,000,000 for Property Loss

By the United Press.

Robert W. Bonynge, American agent handling wartime claims against Germany, yesterday filed with the Mixed Claims Commission a statement in effect holding Germany responsible for payment of $20,000,000 to Americans who lost property in the Black Tom and Kingsland munitions disasters.

Bonynge contended Germany agreed unconditionally at Munich last summer to a compromise settlement affecting these cases. His statement was intended to refute German officials' claims that they were not bound by the Munich negotiations because the conditions on which they were based never materialized.

The Munich plan envisaged payment of $20,000,000 to American interests involved in the Kingsland munitions factory and the Black Tom railroad terminal opposite New York City. Both were destroyed allegedly by German spies.

Bonynge's statement said in part:

"Whatever the intention of the German government or its representatives may have been in negotiating the compromise settlement of the sabotage claims as to asking further efforts to improve the mutual relations between the two governments, the agreement that was executed was clearly not conditioned upon the settlement or discussion of any other matter or difference between the two governments."

He cited in support of his claim various notes from Germans to United States officials, including one from Hauptmann von Pfeffer, chief German negotiator at Munich, to the American Embassy in Berlin, saying in part:

"* * * The German government is agreeable that first of all the attempt will be made amicably to dispose of the old sabotage claims and that this attempt is not dependent upon any conditions."

McCarran Offers 11-Justice Plan

strategy: to join with proponents of the six-justice increase in committee; to vote down all compromise amendments, and then carry the fight openly to the floor. One said: "We want this bill to go to the floor in the worst possible form, and that's the way it is now, with six additional justices on the Supreme Court. We'll fight every move to make any increase at all palatable to the Senate."

The Judiciary Committee heard testimony yesterday from Sylvester Smith, jr., of Phillipsburg, N. J., representing the American Bar Association, to the effect that a secret poll of 70,846 lawyers throughout the country shows a 4-to-1 percentage against the court reform bill.

Smith said that ballots were returned by 18,695 members, with 86 per cent voting against the Roosevelt bill's application to the Supreme Court, and 14 per cent voting against it as applied to the lower courts.

On the ground that the Bar Association poll might not reflect accurately the views of the profession as a whole, the association then sent out ballots to 142,230 nonmember lawyers, taken from law lists.

Did Not Consult Anyone.

Of these, 51,791 were returned, and these averaged 4-to-1 against the bill as it applied to the Supreme Court.

McCarran told reporters he introduced his compromise without consulting anyone else.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, an opposition leader, spoke in Baltimore against the plan last night, centering his attack on the "careless" draftsmanship of New Deal laws, and saying: "Why does the Administration still cry for the grey-haired scalps of those nine old men?" He asserted that the answer was that "rubber stamps" were wanted on the court.

Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), Nebraska, another opposition chief, making his weekly week-end tour against the plan, said in Newark last night, according to the Associated Press, that if the President wins his fight for a "packed court" it "will bring tragic consequences to his legislative program and to party solidarity."

Other witnesses at the hearings yesterday were Paul Shipman Andrews, dean of Syracuse University college of law, and Paul F. Hannah, secretary of the Junior Bar Conference, Washington.

New Faces in Congress

Rep. Mouton Loves Flowers And Memory of Huey P. Long

REPRESENTATIVE ROBERT L. MOUTON.

Louisiana's 'Bob' Would Rather Talk of Gardens Than Politics; Evangeline Country Mayor Served Overseas With Honors.

By Scott Hart.

Join, if you will, such diverse elements as a volcanic energy, a devouring love for flowers, the manners of a gentleman born (which includes a fine courtesy even when he's in a hurry) a big brimming face, a bright necktie and a love for Huey P. Long and you have a glimpse of Representative Bob Mouton, of Louisiana.

"Bob Mouton" is on a sign outside his office door; but he is not one of those "Just-Call-Me-Bob" politicians. A man who has such an aspiration as his wouldn't engage in such flimflam as that. He has aspirations for a flower garden the like of which the Deep South never has known, and that sort of aspiration doesn't wear Boss Tweed's big-middled and checkered vest with a fraternal watchfob and a big label, "Call-Me-Bob," on the waistband.

Mouton will talk politics to you, but he would rather talk about flowers. He is undertaking a breathless enterprise for beauty. It is begun in his already famous Les Jardins de Mouton in LaFayette, La. This is the Evangeline country, that slept and was unnoticed until Huey P. Long blew his political vision through a raucous ram's-horn.

Owes Position to Long.

And this brings up the obligation of Mouton to Long, and, in sequence from that, the creation of the Les Jardins de Mouton. For it was Long who made possible Mouton's presence in Congress, and it is Mouton's presence in Congress that is largely making possible the extension of the gardens.

Mouton now sits behind his desk, and it is a little difficult to see him because flowers are steeped there and a limestone ram is in the way of things. The flowers come from the Les Jardins de Mouton and the ram springs—through derivation—from his family name. A man of such interests might be surprised somewhat to find himself in a political chair. But Mouton isn't because, strangely, he has mixed beauty and politics, a strange cup, for a long time.

Examine the record:

He was born in Duschamp, St. Martin Parish, La., October 20, 1892, and was educated at Southwestern Louisiana Institute. Subsequently, he was a bank runner, an assistant cashier, taught French and typewriting, opened an insurance office, did customs work in Haiti, served with the Marines overseas; was presented the Cross of Leopold for his activities in Belgium; returning to LaFayette, a crowd met him at the train and screamed: "Hello, Mr. Mayor." Later he served as postmaster; again was elected mayor of LaFayette.

Gardens Growing.

And in these years the town took flower. LaFayette—Mouton says so and the records support it—became one of the country's most beautiful cities. And so Mouton conceived the idea of Les Jardins de Mouton. Now they are expanding and visible to travelers on Highway 90, a well-used piece of concrete in the Evangeline country. Mouton says that by next spring the gardens will be more alive with the azaleas, camellias and all the exotic plants that official Washington has come to know.

Official Washington knows these flowers through the thoughtfulness of Mouton. Not more than a week ago, he decorated his own office with them; at other times he has presented them to persons in official life here.

Sitting behind his desk, now, he would rather talk of the flowers than of politics, but he will say Huey Long was responsible for his presence here. There was nothing extraordinary about his election; he simply polished off his incumbent opponent, Numa F. Montet, and came to Washington to be 100 per cent behind the Administration and full of conviction that had Huey Long lived he would have become reconciled to the President.

"I can't say how this would have come about, but there would have been reconciliation," he says.

He won't talk much of Huey Long, but down in Les Jardins de Mouton are Stations of the Cross, and one Station is to Long's memory.

Virginians Band To Ask Amendment On Court Change

Harrisonburg, Va., April 15 (AP).—"We, the People," an organization of citizens asking the President to withhold his Supreme Court plan, or submit the issue to the States in the form of a constitutional amendment, was launched here today.

Approximately 50 Harrisonburg residents signed a membership petition, which circulators said they hoped would eventually carry the signatures of 1,000 in this section of the State.

1,800 Miners Again On Hunger Strike

Berlin, April 15 (AP).—The black flag of hunger-strikers floated again tonight in the Upper Silesian industrial area of Poland—at the Michalskowitz mine near Katowice, where 1,800 men were on strike for higher pay and better working conditions.

About half of them had been underground since the strike was declared Tuesday. The fast began today when the owners rejected their demands.

Father Walsh Analyzes Five Court Decisions

Georgetown U. Official Views Wagner Rulings as Landmark.

Departing from the announced historical subject of his lecture last night at Memorial Continental Hall, the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University, analyzed the significance of the Supreme Court's five Wagner act decisions. He described the event Monday as "another historical landmark in the clarification of the commerce clause of the Constitution."

Father Walsh said in part:

"In these important decisions the court found that Congress had legislated within the powers granted by the Constitution under the commerce clause. Labor relations in the great basic industries are now considered to be vitally related to the free flow of interstate commerce, and collective bargaining is declared a legitimate measure for the maintenance of public order. It should be carefully noted that the decision explicitly limits the jurisditcion of the Labor Relations Board to question arising between an employer and an employe who are engaged in interstate commerce.

Minority Not Hostile.

"It would be an injustice to accuse the minority of hostility to collective bargaining. They simply asserted that no such provision is deducible from the organic law which limits the power of Congress to interstate commerce.

"If further and permanent clarification of the important problem of what constitutes a purely local enterprise is needed, then the proper remedy would be for Congress to proceed on the court's definition of what an interstatal enterprise now means under modern industrial conditions. Or propose an amendment to the commerce clause bringing it up to date in step with the extraordinary development of industry in this country. But such amendment belongs to the people, not to Congress or the Executive.

"If four good men and true say sufficient power is not included in the text of the instructions handed to them by the people through the Constitution, while five equally intelligent judges say they believe the power is there, I submit that the ambiguity lies in the document, not in the court. Clarify the text if that seems advisable, but don't assassinate the character of the dissenters.

No Amendment Required.

"I am even of the opinion that such an amendment is no longer required. With these recent decisions pointing the direction for social legislation, Congress may very safely proceed to further clarification of the remaining difficulties respecting interstate commerce. The court is now on record with its interpretation of the meaning and extent of interstate commerce. If it acts within the newly expounded definition, the Legislature is assured of support. The next step, consequently, lies with Congress, and if care and prudence and restraint be more apparent than they were in previous legislation, further substantial progress may confidently be expected."

Court's Right To Judge New Laws Upheld

Power Set Up by Framers of Constitution, Says Thomas B. Gay.

By the Associated Press.

Alexandria, Va., April 15.—Thomas B. Gay, president of the Richmond Bar Association, declared here tonight that the Supreme Court's power to pass on validity of acts of Congress was firmly established by those responsible for creation of the Constitution.

There is but "one alternative" to the present operation of the court—"an omnipotent Congress," he said. He declared the latter to his mind was far the more objectionable.

Speaking before the Alexandria Bar Association, Gay quoted from an address of the late Joseph W. Bailey to the American Bar Association, when he said:

"Whatever may be the objections to judicial control, they are infinitely less than the objections to legislative omnipotence. Since we must have a final judge, that power can be more safely trusted to the court then to the Congress . . ."

Gay contended the power of judicial review of acts of Congress was "implicit in the language which the framers of the Constitution employed in providing for the creation of the independent branch of the Federal Government."

That this power lies with the judiciary was "abundantly recognized" in debates in the State conventions called to ratify the proposed Constitution, he said, quoting John Marshall's address to the Virginia convention when he said, "to what quarter will you look for protection from an infringement on the Constitution if you will not give the power to the judiciary?"

Gay asked who would determine whether acts of Congress were in pursuance to the Constitution, if the Supreme Court was not permitted to do so.

Power Concern Is Removed in TVA Challenge

Alabama Firm Enjoined From Joining Utilities Injunction Suit.

By the United Press.

Birmingham, Ala., April 15.—Alabama Power Co. today was stricken from the list of private utilities challenging TVA in a United States District Court ruling holding constitutionality of the "yardstick power" project has been established in the United States Supreme Court.

The New Deal power colossus was granted the right to expand its electrification program in Alabama by United States Disrtict Court Judge David J. Davis. The Federal jurist enjoined Alabama Power from joining other major utilities in an injunction suit which had stalemated the development of the vast TVA power network.

Alabama Power was one of 19 private utilities which won an injunction from United States District Judge John J. Gore, of Nashville, restraining TVA from further development of its electrification program pending a final decision on its constitutionality.

Judge Davis, however, ruled today that the Supreme Court ruling in last year's Ashwander decision, granting TVA the right to dispose of surplus power generated at Wilson Dam, is valid over Gore's injunction.

He ruled on petition of James Lawrence Fly, TVA solicitor, who had asked a reiteration of a previous decision from Davis upholding validity of the power project.

Fly contended that all issues involved in the 19-power company injunction had been adjudicated in the Ashwander case. He charged the private utilities of "piracy by multiple litigation."

Following Fly's line of reasoning, the Birmingham Federal jurist held that constitutionality of TVA has been established in the Supreme Court and is not subject to litigation in lower courts.

Meanwhile, TVA attorneys prepared to open a fight in the Sixth Circuit Court at Covington, Ky., tomorrow for a reversal of the Gore injunction.

'But I'm Not Here,' Legally Dead Man Protests to Judge

Oakland, Calif., April 15 (AP).—John J. O'Neil, 36, who says he is legally dead, complicated his arraignment on an arson charge today by contending he was not present.

Neil, who disappeared from his Stamford (Conn.) home in 1924 and subsequently was declared legally dead there, was taken before Police Judge C. B. Fox on charges of starting four small fires in a hotel Tuesday.

"John J. O'Neil," the judge called out.

"That's my name, but I'm not here," said O'Neil.

"What do you mean you're not here?" asked Judge Cox.

"Well, maybe I am here; but I am dead, so I fail to see what you can do to me," replied O'Neil.

Hazen Fights All Downtown Auto Parking

New Shifts in U. S. Employes' Hours Also Urged in Safety Drive.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, returning from a brief South Carolina vacation yesterday, outlined five major steps in highway safety promotion for the District.

He lauded recent proposals to change the present police traffic division to "Safety Division" and said the plan would receive serious consideration when and if it is recommended by Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown.

Important measures for relief of traffic congestion and reduction of Washington's accident toll were listed by the Commissioner as follows:

1. Further staggering of Government employes' hours.
2. Elimination of all downtown parking.
3. A comprehensive street widening program.
4. Additional policemen assigned to traffic duty.
5. Removal of future Federal building plans to suburban sections.

25,000 in "U. S. Triangle."

A present, 25,000 Government workers are employed in the so-called "Federal triangle." A portion of these are now on the stagger-hour system. Hazen suggested that all hours be changed so as to eliminate rush-hour jams.

Proposing to abolish downtown parking, Hazen advocated an act of Congress—"so no Commissioner could change it at the whim of some influential citizen."

He pointed out that steps already have been taken to obtain additional policemen and seek funds for a street widening program.

Speaking of suggestions to change the name of the police traffic division to "Safety Division," Commissioner Hazen said:

"I heartily approve of such a change. It is important that the public be constantly reminded of efforts to bring safety in traffic to our streets."

The proposed change was also discussed by Maj. Brown yesterday at a conference with Inspector William E. Holmes, newly appointed police traffic supervisor. Holmes, it was learned, favored the suggested name as an asset to traffic enforcement and accident prevention.

Instrumental in eliminating Budget Bureau opposition to the inspection bill, Senator Reynolds wrote Commissioner Hazen:

"The revised bill (as recently introduced in the House) changes the form of previously recommended legislation in the sense that inspection fees would go into the general funds, rather than held for strictly inspection purposes. Thus, in a sense, the measure becomes a revenue-raising bill rather than safety legislation.

"My primary concern in this matter had to do with sale of unsafe used cars. Therefore, I am wondering if it would not be feasible to approach this inspection problem by degrees, instead of on a wholesale basis that would place new taxes on all motorists at a time when other tax increases are threatened."

Senator Reynolds suggested that inspections be confined to used cars offered for sale, cars involved in accidents and cars found by police to be operated in an obviously unsafe condition. He advocated District owned and operated inspection stations.

And in spite of the current spring weather, 14 cases involving "snow parking" violations were presented to Judge Walter J. Casey in Traffic Court yesterday.

Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran had previously ruled the snow removal ban illegal and police stopped "ticketing" cars. The District, however, appealed the ruling and a Court of Appeals decision is awaited.

Pending this ruling, Judge Casey yesterday continued the 14 cases indefinitely.

Fearing a repetition of last Sunday's "Cherry Blossom" traffic jam on highways leading into the District, Maj. Brown, at a meeting of traffic authorities in Baltimore, urged motorists to use the "back road" into Washington and relieve congestion on the Baltim re boulevard.

Through agencies of the American Automobile Association, motorists in key cities throughout the East will be asked to travel between Baltimore and Washington by way of Ellicott City, Glen Burnie or Rockville, Md.

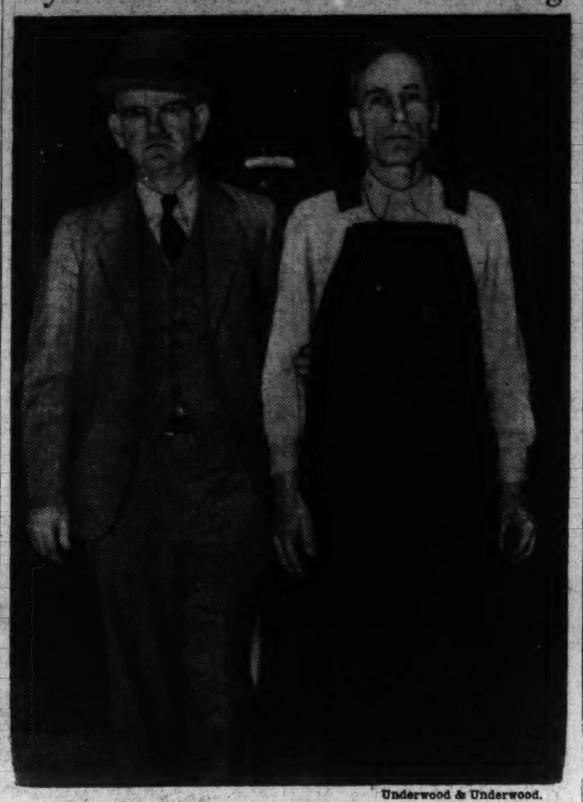
Dynamiter Heard at Senate Hearing



Underwood & Underwood.

Robert C. Tuckett, convicted dynamiter of Harlan, Ky., at present in the District Jail, is shown leaving the committee room in custody of a U. S. deputy marshal after testifying at the civil liberties hearing, where an investigation of strikes in the coal area is being conducted.

is Democratic county committee chairman, Ward said.

How Association Operates.

The association collects around $70,000 yearly through asssessments on the membership, it was revealed, and less than half this sum goes for routine expenses. Assessments are doubled whenever union organization drives are staged, Ward said. Expenses also went up to about $4,000 a month whenever the Legislature met, he stated, and admitted that great efforts were made to insure the defeat of a bill which would have forced coal operators to redeem company scrip at face value.

Most of the payments of the association this year have gone to men who keep United Mine Workers' organizers under surveillance, Ward said. Typical of his admissions before the committee is the following passage between Ward and LaFollette.

Takes No Receipts.

After LaFollette had mentioned that Ben Unthank, missing chief deputy sheriff, received expenses for February of $2,325 over his salary of $150, the Senator asked:

"How do you know what Unthank does with his money?"

"I don't know," said Ward.

"Does he come in and just ask for $1,000, and you hand it over?"

"Yes. I don't take any receipt, either. I don't want to know who works for him."

"Why not?"

"Oh, I don't know. I wouldn't want any of his men coming to the office, or speaking to me outside."

Referring to testimony the day before that Unthank hired men to attempt to murder a union organizer with dynamite, La Follette asked:

"Does that explain why you don't want to know what Unthank does with the money from the coal operators?"

"No," answered Ward.

Several witnesses and citizens of Harlan County who entered the hearing room to listen to the proceedings were searched by Capitol police for firearms. None were armed, but several wore empty arm-holsters for pistols. One said, according to a policeman:

"I don't feel so comfortable without the old holster there, so I wear it anyway."

D. C. Lump-Sum Plan Is Protested

Opposition to the House's intention to limit the Federal contribution to the District to $5,000,000, and deviation from the substantive law calling for a 40-60 distribution of the District's budget expenses was voiced last night by the Federation of Business Men's Associations, meeting in the Hamilton Hotel.

The federation adopted a resolution terming the proposed $5,000,000 contribution "unfair and inadequate," and called attention to the substantive law stating that the Federal Government shall make a 40 per cent contribution to the District's expenses. A second resolution also opposed a tax rate that would create a large surplus, should the Federal share of the budget be reduced to such an extent a material increase in taxes becomes necessary.

Earlier, the federation heard George E. Keneipp, manager of the Keystone Automobile Club, discuss the proposed increase in gasoline tax, registering opposition to any diversion of taxes. The federation adopted a resolution concurring in these sentiments.

F. M. McLaughlin, first vice president, presided. The Connecticut Avenue Association was elected to membership.

Aimee Insists Lawyer Smile In Slander Suit

Attorney Tears Hair While Her Mother Is Called a 'Female Neptune.'

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, April 15.—Attorneys and principals in Roberta Semple's suit for slander ignored judicial decorum in court today and locked in a series of catch-as-catch-can verbal exchanges with no holds barred.

Much was said, but little went into the records.

Evangelist Aimee Semple McPherson, mother of Roberta but a witness against her, sat primly on the witness stand. Most of the time she was technically—but not actually—mute, the majority of her remarks being aimed at attorneys and not the official reporter.

Defendant in the Angelus Temple family affair is Mrs. McPherson's attorney, Willedd Andrews. Miss Semple alleges he slandered her by saying she was expelled recently from the Temple for trying to "blackmail" her mother. She asks $150,000.

The fireworks began as soon as the judge took his seat.

Andrews' counsel, Joseph Scott, famous California lawyer and Republican Party chieftain, said he wanted to know the exact status in the courtroom of Mrs. Minnie "Ma" Kennedy, blonde mother of Mrs. McPherson.

Yesterday, speaking to her daughter for the first time in ten years, Mrs. Kennedy sharply upbraided Aimee for her testimony regarding Roberta.

"Mrs. Kennedy personally attacked the witness," Scott said. "She upset her. I want to inquire if she is going to be a witness, and to say that if not she be ordered to sit outside the railing.

"She has been running around here like a female Neptune of the equator. I won't have her facing this witness and annoying her any longer."

Roberta's lawyer, Joseph Fainer, then resumed his cross-examination of Aimee. She suddenly cried out:

"You're sneering at me and the Temple. You stand there and frown. You could smile a little."

Fainer tore his thick, black hair.

"Your honor," he pleaded, "I'm not sneering. I don't want to smile and I don't have to if I don't want to. This is my natural manner."

State Senate May Join Investigation Of Girls' Assault

Putnam, Conn., April 15 (AP).—Possibility that the State Senate would join three other agencies in looking into conditions and administration of the Windham County Temporary Home for Children developed today. Two men are under arrest as a result of a two-day investigation.

Senator J. Kenneth Bradley introduced a resolution calling for an investigation by the Senate Committee on Public Welfare.

Two girls, 15 and 16, who fled the home, preferred charges which led to the arrest yesterday of the 65-year-old superintendent of the home, Philip Provandie. He is awaiting trial on charges of indecent assault. Wendel D. Ford, 36, of Malden, Mass., a nephew of Provandie's wife, was held in $500 bail in Malden District Court today in connection with the investigation.

County Commissioner Albert J. Cavanault said disclosures regarding the home's financial affairs would overshadow the assault charges against Provandie.

Schroeder Quits U. S. Air Bureau

The successor to Maj. Rudolph W. Schroeder, assistant director of Air Commerce, who has resigned to be a vice president of United Air Lines, has not yet been determined, it was announced yesterday at the Bureau of Air Commerce.

Schroeder's resignation was revealed Wednesday night at an aviation banquet in New York. He will become vice president of United Air Lines, in charge of that company's West Coast and transcontinental operations. The date for his leaving has not been set.

His decision was accepted with "deep regret" by Col. J. Munroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce.

Schroeder has had nearly 27 years' experience in military and commercial flying. In 1920 he set the world's altitude record while an Army flier.

Anti-Lynch Bill Passes House in Stormy Session

tempting to reduce debate to a minimum in confidence they had votes sufficient to pass the measure.

These speeches were made by Representative Hatton W. Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, Judiciary Committee chairman, and Representative James Wadsworth (Republican), of New York, for, and Representative Mitchell (Republican), of Illinois, against, the bill.

Northerners Warned.

In a 40-minute warning to Northern members that the bill would give the Federal Government the power to "prosecute a State in Federal courts," Sumners denounced it as the result of "an acute attack of Federalitis." His remarks drew cheers from Democrats and Republicans alike.

"Why don't you let us alone and give us a chance to show what we can do about this situation?" the Texan pleaded, in a voice charged with feeling, pointing directly to members guiding the bill through the debate.

"Man to man, before your God," he shouted, "do you think this legislation is necessary when the crime has been reduced to one in 15,000,000?"

This "pestiferous interference by the North," he said, "will come to curse and plague all of you." Sumners said the bill would permit the Federal Government to prosecute a Governor in whose State a lynching occurred, and denied its constitutionality.

Tells of Mob Fear.

On an occasion when he was teaching in Alabama, Mitchell said, a mob "marched within three miles of my schoolhouse to lynch me because I had stopped payment on a check obtained from me through fraud."

"The best thing you can do to encourage the Negro race is to pass this legislation," he declared.

"It is the duty of Congress to say to these 14,000,000 colored people, most of whom live in constant fear of being lynched, that we will throw around them the arms of protection to which every citizen is entitled."

Despite decision of House Republicans in conference last week to support the bill, Wadsworth assailed it as "a snare and a delusion" which never can be enforced and "will bring disillusionment to millions." He said he believed "the majority of the well-meaning citizens of Mississippi were shocked" by Tuesday's lynchings.

An arch enemy of prohibition legislation during eighteenth amendment days, Wadsworth drew parallel arguments against the Gavagan bill as an invasion of State sovereignty which would "reverse the whole philosophy underlying American democracy."

The debate, opened with the contention by Representative Johnson (Democrat), of Texas, that lynching and the Gavagan bill are alike indefensible, ran through three hours of general discussion and then spent itself in episodic acrimony under the five-minute rule.

Gifford Brings Laughter.

In the course of these brief speeches, Representative Gifford (Republican), of Massachusetts, drew tension-breaking laughter when he told the colored race that "the Republican Party is still with you, although you have entirely deserted us;" Representative Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, caustically noted he had found anti-Semitism prevalent in the North and unknown in the South; Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, charged the Democratic Party "now that it has grown fat and powerful," proposes to betray the South, which "for more than 100 years has kept the party alive;" and Representative Robsion (Republican), of Kentucky, an approximate neutral, said the bill will promote lynching because it does not apply to such crimes when victims are not in custody of the law.

All efforts to alter the bill were beaten down.

Representative Howard W. Smith (Democrat), of Alexandria, achieved brief success in a fight on sections 5 and 6, requiring counties in which lynchings occur to pay damages, but he was defeated when another vote was taken after the House dissolved itself from committee of the whole.

An attempt to include kidnaping in the bill was made by Representative Colmer (Democrat), of Mississippi, but his amendment was ruled out of order.

Nazis Show U. S. Strike Films, Point to Serenity in Germany

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, April 15.—Berlin movie houses today featured news-reel portrayals of American labor strikes with commenators to point out the "serenity" of workers under the Nazi regime.

The lynching of two colored men in Mississippi and the showing of a motion picture in a New York church to raise funds for German refugees also provided material for Nazi comparison with democratic governments.

The news-reel commentator at various German theaters observes invariably strikes are making heavy inroads on national wealth in America, but that German conditions under the Nazi regime are such that peace, serenity and security for both worker and employer prevail.

"Disgust" in U. S.

The entire German press gave much space to the colored lynchings by a Duck Hill (Miss.) mob in retaliation for the slaying of a country merchant.

"An outcry of disgust has swept the American public," one newspaper proclaimed, "certain circles of which usually try to incite feeling against Nazi Germany and its racial laws, which are enforced in a humane manner."

American friendliness to Jews also stirred editorial writers to comment on the film shown in Riverside Memorial Church in New York as part of a $400,000 campaign for relief of Christian German refugees.

"This film reveals with terrible clearness the un-Christian methods with which a new anti-German drive is to be launched in the American churches by a small un-American clique whose aim is to misuse American religious sentiments for nefarious ends."

Called "Lying Film."

"Anti-German Lying Film! Jewish Emigrants Stirring Up Hatred Before the Altar," were headings above the editorials.

All these manifestations of anti-American feeling appeared to foreign observers to furnish background for attacks on the democratic system of government in general.

Since the United States, Great Britain and France joined in a democratic monetary bloc last fall, editorials have been devoted increasingly to the thesis that democracies are failures.

Hits American System.

Latest illustration of such theorizing is in the National-Zeitung Essen, whose observations were captioned: "Democracy and Popular Weal—America's Recipes for Right Way to Live Unconvincing."

The editorial observers: "In this most democratic country in the world, a thousand daily lose the land on their farms, their jobs in their factories."

A dozen billionaires own two-thirds of America's wealth, the editorial concludes, and "How is it that this people which sits amid plenty and yet starves, which cannot master its own problems, keeps arrogating to itself the right to teach us what to do?"

Edison Describes How Industry Aids Research of Navy

The close integration between business and the research program of the U. S. Navy was described last night by Assistant Secretary Charles Edison in an address before the American Society of Naval Engineers meeting at the Willard Hotel.

Stressing the close co-operation between naval research units and other governmental scientific organizations, he said business firms were working similarly with the Navy. "The excellence of modern naval equipment," he added, "is largely due to the assistance of American industry in the improvement of methods and equipment through scientific investigation."

He described briefly the Navy's various research programs and testing laboratories.

"Although the immediate function of research is to carry out the stated policy, yet in a large sense the prime function of scientific research in the naval establishment is to guarantee national security," he concluded, adding that the program was helping "to create, maintain and operate a Navy second to none."

Act to Punish Sit-ins Passes Calif. Senate

Sacramento, Calif., April 15 (AP).—The California Senate passed an act today which would exclude sit-downs from the definition of strikes and class them as misdemeanors punishable under the criminal code.

The bill, which goes to the Assembly, provides for an industrial court of seven members to which either employe or employer may make voluntary appeal for adjudication of labor troubles.

Unsolved Murder Laid to Dead Man

Philadelphia, April 15 (AP).—The 5-year-old murder of Norman R. Bechtel, 31, a church worker, was believed by police to be solved today by the statement of a colored truck driver that a Colored janitor, who has since died, stabbed Bechtel to death.

The truck driver, William Jordan, 36, testified before Mayor S. Davis Wilson that Oliver Armstrong, the janitor, killed Bechtel the night of January 19, 1932, while he and two other Colored men and a Colored woman looked on. Armstrong, he said, believed Bechtel was responsible for the loss of his job.

The other three, John Coles, 41; Fletcher Williams, 30, and Lucile Young, 29, denied they witnessed the murder. They were held without bail, with Jordan on a charge of murder.

Fashion Writer Holds Beauty Chief Interest

85 Attend Luncheon Given by Women's Division of The Post.

A behind-the-scenes view of fashion reporting was presented yesterday by Alice Hughes, New York style authority and columnist, at a luncheon given at the Hotel Willard by the women's department of The Washington Post. The luncheon was attended by about 85 guests, including women store executives, buyers, stylists, advertising writers and newspaper writers.

Miss Hughes, whose column, "A Woman's New York," appears on the woman's page of The Post, told of her experiences in gathering fashion information and other news of interest to women. Fashion writing, to be interesting, she pointed out, should be related to human interest and not deal with the inanimate.

Home Ranks Second.

The chief interest of women today, Miss Hughes said she believed, was beauty—including the rejuvenation and decoration of the body. Household interests she ranked as second and bridge as third.

Before entering newspaper work Miss Hughes wrote fashion advertising copy for Macy's store in New York. Later she established a newspaper shopping column which she still conducts. In gathering general news for her syndicated column she makes frequent trips to Europe. She is a member of the staff of the new School for Fashion Careers, which will open in New York this fall.

Leonard Hall, magazine writer and former dramatic critic, made a brief talk on "The Technique of Being the Husband of a Fashion Writer." Mrs. Eugene Meyer, wife of the publisher of The Post, spoke briefly describing Miss Hughes' column as "the most cheerful column appearing today in newspapers."

Dr. Stanley Among Guests.

Among the guests of honor were Dr. Louise Stanley, head of the Bureau of Home Economics of the Department of Agriculture; Mrs. Ellen Woodward, assistant administrator of the WPA in charge of women's projects; Miss Charl O. Williams, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs; Miss Ruth Robinson, president of the District branch of the federation; Miss Mary Hornaday, president of the Women's National Press Club; Miss Ruth Van Deman, head of publicity of the Home Economics Bureau.

Security Board Denies Offering More Jobs Here

Possibility of more jobs here in the Social Security Board was exploded by that agency yesterday when it denied that a possible decentralization of the huge Baltimore bookeeping office would bring increased employment here.

A plan to divide the bookkeeping work on 26,000,000 accounts among 12 cities, including Washington, made known yesterday, may not take effect for three years, if ever, a spokesman said.

At present 2,500 emergency accountants are setting up the agency's new accounts in Baltimore, but as soon as preliminary work is finished, many will be dismissed, thus eliminating possibility of new jobs here, it was explained.

Officials said the decentralization plan under study contemplated record-keeping at 12 division offices: Washington, Boston, New York, Cleveland, Chicago, Birmingham, San Antonio, Denver, Minneapolis, Kansas City, San Francisco and Philadelphia.

Husband at 16 Accused Of Abandoning Family

New York, April 15 (AP).—The turbulent matrimonial career of Burton Tucker, who married a 48-year-old widow in 1923 when he was 16, marched on today when it was revealed he had been indicted for abandoning his three children. A detective left to bring him here from Topsfield, Mass.

The indictment was filed March 10 on the complaint of his wife, Mrs. Olive Burnham Simpson Tucker, widow of a wealthy New York real estate operator.

Statesman-Journalist Mingles With Editors

interested women were bridge, knitting and the radio. But in the meantime, she said, there has been a decided change.

1. Beauty of face and figure.
2. Human relations.
3. Fashions.
4. Children.
5. Household affairs.

"Intelligent women want to know what is happening in the world," she said, "but they read the news columns for news. They do not seek the women's pages for stimulation of the mind, but for pleasing distraction. They want a sufficient smattering of what's going on among other women to be able to give and take in current conversation.

"They like to read about women who have reached the top in their various fields. They like to rub elbows in the newspapers with their lady ministers plenipotentiary, Congresswomen and businesswomen.

"The doings of Miss Gloria Sourpuss, of Broadway and Park avenue, are of great interest to women across the Hudson, for glamour is an elusive quality and, to most of us, it seems that the other person has what we crave.

"The women's page of today does not need more patterns and more recipes. It needs—well, let's say—glamour.

"Glamour is a magnetic luster which draws toward the person who has it, just what and whom she wants. It is acquired by a mixture of cosmetics, clothes and confidence. While it is only a veneer at first, it may soon become a permanent finish. It does not need to spoil the person who possesses it, but should, on the contrary make that person more desirable, attractive—in a world—glamorous."

The Quintuplets Have It.

Miss Hughes said that the Dionne quintuplets have glamour, and in that connection she urged editors to print more baby pictures of every kind.

Mr. Creager called the convention to order. After tribute had been paid to the late Fred Fuller Shedd, of the Philadelphia Bulletin, Creager delivered his annual address, warning that newspapermen must be individuals, not button-hole makers.

"Standardization nevertheless has its nose under our tent flaps," Creager said. "Standardized features have tended to make newspaper offices into assembly plants rather than real producers. But the nose is getting longer. There comes now a demand that the editorial workers shall conform to certain tests imposed by a membership in a national organization and that none be employed or remain employed except members of that organization. Happily this demand is being generally withstood.

No Quarrel on Pay Issue.

"Insofar as these demands relate to better pay and working conditions there can be no quarrel with them. Newspapers demand the best that is in a man in brain, energy and loyalty. They should pay liberally for that brain, energy and loyalty, and they have not all done so.

"Happily there is a definite upward trend in editorial pay. There is a very remote danger of a faithful worker ever being overpaid. Better pay adds to the dignity and influence of our calling. But journalism will have suffered a net loss if better pay has as its corollary outside tests for employment. It will have sacrificed individuality. We will have become button makers and toothpick whittlers."

Commenting on the last national election and the part played therein by the American press, Creager said:

"What we have seen is in no real sense a defeat for the press. It is rather another striking demonstration that the public power of the press lies in informing rather than in exhorting, in stimulating rather than in converting. It is left for newspapers to light the way."

Prof. Murphy, president of the American Association of Schools and Departments of Journalism, told the editors that the number of such schools which have received the society's approval has increased from 18 to 32 in 10 years; that whereas there were 900 graduated from journalism schools in 1927, 1,250 were graduated last year, but that the supply of good graduates was not yet large enough.

Out of last year's 1,250 graduates, Prof. Murphy said, only 400 sought daily newspaper work, the remainder going to weekly newspapers, magazines, trade papers and publicity work.

Research Foundation Urged.

Mr. Nash, of the Walter Williams Memorial Journalism Foundation, urged the need of an endowment for a research foundation that might do for the newspaper business what the Rockefeller Foundation is doing in the field of medicine.

M. V. Atwood, of the Gannett newspapers, secretary of the society, reported that it now has 222 members.

Today's session in the auditorium of the Press Club will start at 10 a. m., with George F. Milton, of the Chattanooga News, talking on "Freedom of the Press."

H. L. Mencken, of the Baltimore Sun, and Edson K. Bixby, of the Springfield (Mo.) News-Leader, will follow with a discussion "Are Editorials Effective?"

At a luncheon in the Press Club, which will be presided over by A. H. Kirchhofer, of the Buffalo Evening News, Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, will give an off-the-record talk.

John Martin, managing editor of Time, will talk at the outset of the 2 p. m. session, followed by Dr. George Gallup, director of the American Institute of Public Opinion, and John H. Sorrells, of the Memphis Commercial Appeal. The latter two will discuss "Newspaper Surveys."

At 7 p. m. the editors will gather for a buffet supper at the home of Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post. At 9 p. m. they will be the guests of the Press Club, which will unreel a new motion picture, "Captains Courageous."

The convention will be concluded tomorrow.

Laura V. McLean, 80, To Be Buried Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Laura Virginia McLean, 80, retired employe of the Government Printing Office, who died Wednesday at the home of her daubhter, Mrs. Annie L. Hunt, at 3615 Albemarle street northwest, will be held today at 2 p. m. at Hines funeral home. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

The widow of George H. McLean, Mrs. McLean was a life long resident of Washington. She was retired from Government service 15 years ago after 30 years' service. Besides Mrs. Hunt, she is survived by two other daughters, Mrs. May E. Ryce, of this city, and Mrs Lillian V. Hyams, Los Angeles, and a brother, Frank Germon, of this city.

Low-Bracket Income Taxes Are Threatened

Treasury, Congress Surveys Spur Drive to Slash Relief Expenses.

payers, whereas this country allows believe it was implied in his state- $2,500.

Similar lowering of exemptions and bolstering of rates was believed imminent here, should existing tax laws be thrown open for review.

Taxes Used as Threat.

While no new tax legislation is now on the schedule, and virtual promises were made in the campaign, none was in prospect, the drop of $500,000,000 in revenues below estimates has materially altered the budget picture. Word is being passed at the Capitol that new revenue proposals would follow any extensive disregard of budget estimates by Congress.

The tax warning already has been used in opposition to the Harrison-Black bill for Federal education subsidies to the States approximating $1,000,000,000 in five years. But this bill has wide support in the Senate, and a move to pass it over Administration opposition will be made early next week.

There is less Administration resistance to the Jones farm tenancy bill, due up in the House on Tuesday, and the Wagner housing bill, about to be reported from a Senate committee. These measures would involve an additional cost of about $185,000,000 the first year.

Budget Slash Expected.

Relief appeared due for material cuts, in the President's effort to effect a "layman's balance" of the budget. The President may recommend from $100,000,000 to $300,000,000 less for relief in his budget message than the $1,500,000,000 frequently mentioned. Large cuts in WPA rolls to be made as the summer approaches may be maintained substantially through the winter, with renewed efforts to find private employment for the needy and greater emphasis on State responsibility.

A serious effort to shift a greater degree of relief responsibility already is under way in the Senate. Senator John F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, member of the Senate Appropriations Committee, already has undertaken a survey with this end in view.

District Court Opens Forgery Trial of Rhodes

Gordon Asks for Minutes of Meeting of Fidelity Directors' Board.

The trial of Fred B. Rhodes, former president of the now-closed Fidelity Building and Loan Association, on a charge of forging the name of Desire A. Irr, a depositor, to a withdrawal slip for $1,500 was begun in District Court yesterday before Justice Peyton Gordon. A few weeks ago a mistrial was declared in Rhodes' first trial because the jury failed to agree.

Rhodes, under indictment on 20 larceny and 4 forgery charges, is said to have admitted he wrote the name of Irr on the withdrawal slip because the latter had authorized him to use his funds to help the association. The banker-lawyer is 60 years old and has four children. He lives on upper Seventeenth street northwest.

William E. Leahy, defense attorney, and John J. Wilson, assistant United States attorney, selected a jury yesterday morning and outlined their case to the jurors.

The first witness called was Mrs. Ruth S. Horner, who occupied a minor executive position in the association. She was still on the stand when Justice Gordon recessed court until Monday morning.

Three Convicts Meet Death in 'Humane' Chair

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 16 (Friday).—Three paroled convicts died in the electric chair early today to expiate the murders of two Chicago policemen.

Their grim parade to the execution chamber in the Cook County jail began four minutes after midnight. Twenty-nine minutes later—at 12:33 a. m.—the last was pronounced dead.

Joseph Schuster, 30, went first.

The next to leave his death cell was Stanley Murawski, 37.

Then came Murawski's partner in crime, Frank "Doc" White, 47.

Four guards were assigned to pull four switches simultaneously on the big panel near the electrocution chamber shortly after midnight, but only one was connected to the cable carrying the lethal current. The others were dummies. The idea behind the innovation was that the identity of the actual executioner would thus be concealed—even from himself.

Dr. A. A. Brill, one of New York's foremost psychologists, deprecated the efficacy of the scheme. He said:

"The four guards who throw the switches, even though none knows which actually carries the current, will all have the same reaction. They'll all be sure they were responsible for killing a man."

A mechanically operated device had been installed for fastening the men by simply moving one lever. The strapping process, a matter of minutes when done by hand, became a matter of seconds.

Conspicuous wires in the seat of death were hidden beneath a mat.

Elwood Street Praises Nonpolitical D. C. Setup

With the exception of the Home for the Aged at Blue Plains, every activity conducted by the Board of Public Welfare is designed to rehabilitate and train people to better themselves, according to Elwood Street, director of the board. Street was the principal speaker at yesterday's meeting of the Cosmopolitan Club.

He praised the lack of politics in the setup of the District government and attributed much of the success of public welfare to the nonpartisan board of citizens in charge of this work.

Secret Wife Wins Right To 'Bachelor's' Estate

Atlantic City, N. J., April 15 (AP). Mrs. Elsie Gemill Mitchell, who claimed she lived secretly as the wife of L. Arthur Richards for 17 years while he posed as a bachelor in the fashionable circles of better neighborhoods, won in orphans' court today the right to administer his $100,000 estate.

After Richards died last October, Mrs. Mitchell charged that since 1919 she had lived with him and their son in one section of town while he played bridge in fashionable homes and kept secret their alleged marriage ceremony.

Catholics Not Against Spanish Republic, Law Leader Asserts

Montavon, Director of Church's National Legal Department, Tells Radio Audience Army Rule Equally Feared.

Evidence does not sustain the charge that Catholics of Spain were in league against the republic or even against the Popular Front, William Montavon, director of the legal department of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, declared last night in a radio address over the National Broadcasting Co. network.

When the insurrection broke out last July, Montavon said, "A lot of people in Spain, most of them Catholics, thought that only another mutiny in the army was taking place. They knew that government by the army might be just as bad as government by the Popular Front. Some of them thought it might even be worse."

Some Wired Support.

At that time, the speaker declared, District leaders of the C. E. D. A. (the Catholic Party of Gil Robles) from Valencia and other cities "wired assurance of their support to the Popular Front."

Montavon gave brief reference to the present characters of the war in Spain. He said:

"It is most unfortunate that Spaniards have not been permitted to settle their own dispute. If unhappy Spain today is the battlefield for a little world war, responsibility lies not primarily on the Catholic people of Spain."

Then the Catholic leader said:

"Read the minutes of the Seventh World Congress of the Communist International. It reveals where lies the major responsibility."

Russia was the only foreign nation mentioned by Montavon. He continued:

"That this civil war would become a conflict international in character was inevitable. If the bells of the Kremlin have tongues to summon to life Soviet republics in the Iberian Peninsula, who can deny that some day, knowing no frontiers, the same bells may be summoning similar Soviet republics in other nations.

"War of Extermination."

"The strength of world revolution is being tested in Spain. The advocates of two irreconcilable ideologies are there arrayed against each other in a war of extermination."

Then Montavon took a slap at supporters of the Spanish democracy. He said:

"Those who denounce this insurrection, shed tears over what they refer to as the legally constituted government of Spain.

"Every Christian knows that constituted authority has the right to be respected and obeyed.

"But constituted authority has not only rights. It has duties too.

"When constituted authority invades unjustly the rights of the citizen, the citizen has the right of self-defense.

"The Popular Front government of Spain must stand or fall on its own merits."

Rich Farmer, Kin Beaten to Death; Wife Shut in Bin

Howell, Mich., April 15 (AP).—J. H. Davis, 71, well-to-do farmer, and his sister-in-law, Mrs. Lydia Hilderbrand, of Utica, Mich., were found beaten to death at their farm home near Fenton today. Mrs. Davis also was beaten so severly that she is not expected to live.

Davis' body was found in bed. Mrs. Hilderbrand's body and Mrs. Davis, unconscious, were found in the barn, in a grain bin the lid of which had been nailed shut.

Sheriff Irvin Kennedy ordered his deputies to search for a farm laborer employed by Davis about six weeks ago.

Glasgow, April 15 (AP).—Negotiations failed today to avert a one-day strike set for tomorrow by 120,000 Clydeside ship workers in sympathy with 13,000 apprentices who demanded increased wages.

Film Star Threat Sender Is Trapped By Return Address

Chicago, April 15 (AP).—The quick tracing of a return address today led to the arraignment of a gangling, 18-year-old garage mechanic on charges of sending an extortion letter to Ginger Rogers, film actress, demanding $500 under threat of death.

The captive, John A. Buzas, alias John Berton, was held under $3,500 bond after his case was continued to April 28 and the district attorney's office announced he would be subjected to a mental examination.

Federal Agent W. J. Devereux said the prisoner's diary disclosed he had mailed the missive April 8 and was considering a similar note to Clark Gable. The Government operatives said he had inclosed a photograph of himself, written a return address only a few doors from his Southside home and signed the name of "Berton."

Loyalist Drive Broken; Rebels Toast Victory

loyalist offensive had been repulsed, the Madrid war office insisted tonight that it had brought "many major victories," particularly on the north, beyond Guadalajara, and south of the capital along the Toledo road.)

In addition to 7,000 loyalist killed in the frustrated offensive, Franco's officers estimated that 13,000 were wounded.

The 10,000 rebels holding out in the ruins of University City, northwestern cultural suburb, successfully resisted sporadic attempts to drive them back across the Manzanares River into the Casa de Campo and their lines of supplies, and communications with the main rebel force remained in tact.

Ironically, Gen. Miaja selected the sixth anniversary of the founding of the republic—which is fighting to defend—to abandon his offensive.

Rebels Take Durango.

St. Jean de Luz, France, April 15 (AP).—An insurgent communique said tonight an advance guard of the northern insurgent army of Gen. Emilio Mola had entered Durango, key to the defense of Bilbao, Basque capital.

Two British freighters meanwhile left port with cargoes of food intended originally for Bilbao. They did not give their destination, but a port official said he believed at least one of the ships might attempt to run the insurgent blockade of Bilbao.

U. S. Volunteers Sentenced.

Perpignan, France, April 15 (AP).—Six Americans were sentenced to one month in prison today on charges of attempting to enter Spain to volunteer in the government army. They were arrested near Thuir April 9, the third group to have been arrested within a week.

The Americans identified themselves as Aba Letvin, 22, student, New York; Morris Simon Fishman, 34, grocer, Los Angeles; Everett Willoughby, 26, metal worker, Marion, Ohio; Albert Byron Sanford, 29, mechanic, Rochester, N. Y.; Raymond Elvin Tiger, 24, salesman, Alfalfa, Okla.; Herbert Hart Hutner, 27, writer, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Russia, Italy Reconciled.

London, April 15 (AP).—Russia and Italy, by seemingly burying the hatchet over Spain, paved the way tonight for nonintervention committee deliberations on a plan to withdraw all foreigners from the Spanish civil war.

A sub-committee earlier had set midnight of next Monday, April 19, for the start of an international land-and-sea blockade to enforce the neutrality group's edict barring additional men and arms from Spain.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 15.—A soft-drawling farmer's wife from the hills of West Virginia, on her first visit to New York, took Broadway's "Big City" dazzle right in stride today, amiably admitted its marvels—and just as amiably insisted that her home town is a "right pert place, too."

Winner of a Nation-wide pre-election contest for the best pro-Roosevelt essay, Mrs. Mary Flanagan, 45, of Montrose, W. Va., squinted down at the crowds from the thirty-fourth floor window of her hotel and said admiringly:

"Look at the folks!"

But neither the height, nor the crowds, nor the reporters nor photographers abashed her.

"I've never been more than a few miles from home before in my life," she admitted cheerfully. "But this isn't the highest up I been. No, sir. Back home we've a got a knob 2½ miles up. And I've walked up it.

"Crowds bother me? No, sir. We've got 200 folks in Montrose—a right pert place. And I've been to Elkins. They've got a movie theater there."

Mrs. Flanagan, who will sail Saturday on the S. S. California on her prize-winning cruise to Havana, showed less embarrassment than the newspaper interviewers who swarmed into her suite.

"Come in, come in!" she said. "I've raised ten children. I don't mind a little fuss. You want to take my picture? All right. I don't mind," she said, and posed by the window.

"From what I heard about big cities, I'm surprised to see trees and grass and those yellow flowering bushes right here in the heart of things," she said.

To the comment that was "miraculous" her having such a grasp on national affairs and economic issues, as displayed in her prize-winning essay, Mrs. Flanagan retorted:

"Miraculous nothing! We have a good weekly paper and it runs a full page of national news every week, so naturally I'd have a few ideas. I've got a whole heap of ideas, for that matter.

"If you write anything about me, please send it to the Clarksburg Exponent, so the folks back home will know I've really been here—and tell 'em I'm going to have a new permanent!"

British Convicts Reported Balked In Mutiny Plans

London, April 15 (AP).—Dissatisfied convicts at Dartmoor Prison, England's bleak "granite jug," were reported today to have been balked in a plot for a coronation day mutiny. Officials, however, denied the existence of such a plot.

An unconfirmed report said the prisoners, angered because King George VI would not reduce sentences or grant pardons in celebration of his coronation May 12, had arranged a "break" during the crowning ceremonies.

Mrs. Laura Lisner Wills $2,000,000

Mrs. Laura Hartmann Lisner, wife of Abram Lisner, former owner of the Palais Royal Department Store, left an estate valued in excess of $2,000,000, it was learned in District Court yesterday when a petition for probate of her will was filed. Mrs. Lisner died at her home, 1725 Massachusetts avenue northwest, March 26.

Mrs. Lisner had deeds of trust notes valued at $734,000, stocks, worth now, $262,000; Government bonds and other bonds, $969,000; cash in bank, $43,820.04.

In addition there is real estate in the District with an assessed valuation of $104,314, and a country residence at Springfield, N. H., with an undetermined valuation. The will, the terms of which previously were published, made Mr. Lisner the beneficiary of a $1,000,000 trust fund.

Charge Entirely False, Trotsky Tells 'Jury'

Mexico City, April 15 (AP).—Leon Trotsky completed his defense against Moscow charges of treason today by telling the unofficial "jury" the charges were "completely false from beginning to end."

The "jury," a committee of liberals, headed by Dr. John Dewey, New York educator, will begin the cross-examination of the exiled former Bolshevist leader tomorrow morning.

Radio Operator Strike Called; Affects 17 Ships

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 15.—A strike of wireless operators on all ships operated by the International Mercantile Marine and its subsidiaries now in United States ports was called today by the American Radio Telegraphers Association.

The strike call followed collapse of negotiations to settle a dispute that prevented the United States liner President Roosevelt from sailing for Europe yesterday. Some 70 of the President Roosevelt's 217 passengers sailed last night on the Hamburg. The remaining 147 were transferred to a British ship, the Cunard White Star liner Berengaria, which left at noon.

Three hundred of the Panama Pacific liner California's crew promptly sat down in sympathy with the crew of the President Roosevelt, tied up at an adjoining North River pier.

Three More Ships Affected.

Strike leaders announced the American Banker, in New York, the City of Norfolk, in Baltimore, and the Virginia, in San Diego, also were or soon would be affected.

They said the strike would be extended to the express liner Manhattan when she arrives here tomorrow from Europe.

Altogether, the I. M. M. fleet totals 17 vessels. Several are at sea.

The company tonight called on the National Labor Relations Board to hold an election to ascertain who are the duly authorized representatives of its employes in various ship departments.

John M. Franklin, president of the I. M. M., wrote to Mrs. Elinore M. Herrick, regional director of the labor board, late today asking an election "in the immediate future."

It was probably the first instance since the Supreme Court last Monday upheld the Wagner labor relations act that an employer went to the labor board in an industrial dispute.

The sit-down was a direct aftermath of the intraunion struggle that tied up American shipping in Atlantic and Gulf ports for three months last winter.

The engine room crew on the President Roosevelt refused to work with seven replacements who, they said, had not supported the insurgent faction led by Joseph Curran in last winter's strike.

Picket Line Holds.

The seven left the ship today, but two wireless operators, against whom similar objections were made, remained on board.

Substitutes were hired for the seven challenged members of the "black gang," but they refused to pass through a picket line when they arrived at the pier.

Mervyn Rathborne, head of the Radio Operators' Union, said the issuance of the strike call coincided with the receipt by his organization of a charter in the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Rathborne said his union was joining forces with the United Electrical and Radio Workers in a campaign to organize all workers in the communications field.

Japanese Thief Steals Helen Keller's Purse

Tokyo, April 15 (AP).—A pickpocket today stole the purse of Helen Keller, celebrated blind and deaf educator, a few moments after she had stepped ashore at Yokohama for a Japanese lecture tour.

All Japan was aroused at the incident, occurring, as it did, on Miss Keller's first visit to the Orient. A widespread search for the culprit was under way. The purse contained 200 yen (about $60). Miss Keller herself did not report the theft and police learned of it only by chance.

province would handle the situation itself.

Hepburn, who forced the resignation of two dissenting members of his cabinet and assumed the labor portfolio himself, insisted, over the denials of Dominion Defense Minister Ian MacKenzie, that the federal government had agreed to send troops to Oshawa.

Hepburn asserted Ernest Lapointe, federal minister of justice, retracted a promise of police aid, and asked the central government to withdraw 100 mounted police who have been quartered in Toronto since the strike began eight days ago.

The premier said Ontario, instead, would recruit 200 additional provincial police to supplement 100 already sworn in for use if trouble develops at Oshawa, which has been peaceful.

Homer Martin, U. A. W. president, has threatened to call a sit-down strike in General Motors plants in the United States unless General Motors of Canada, Ltd., made an agreement with the union.

Picher, Okla., April 15 (AP).—Affiliation of the Tri-State Metal, Mine and Smelter Union, some of whose members were shot by C. I. O. unionists at Galena, Kans., Sunday, with the American Federation of Labor, was announced by President F. W. (Mike) Evans tonight.

The A. F. of L. will go before the National Labor Relations Board to have the blue card unit recognized as the sole bargaining agent for all the metal mines, mills and smelters in the tri-State field of Oklahoma, Kansas and Missouri.

Union Claims Recognition by Ford in West

Two-Point Compact Averts Strike, Asserts U. A. W. 'Frisco Official.

By the Associated Press.

Oakland, Calif., April 15.—Frank Slabey, head of the East San Francisco Bay Local of the United Automobile Workers, announced tonight his union had been recognized by the management of the Richmond assembly plant of the Ford Motor Co.

Slabey said Clarence O. Bullwinkle, plant manager, agreed to recognize the shop steward as representing the workers in collective demands. The company also will create a seniority list, from which lay-offs will be determined, he added.

Unions have contended in many industrial disputes that union men were laid off first during slack periods.

Confirmation Needed.

The two-point compact, which Slabey heralded as union recognition, must be sent east to Ford headquarters for final confirmation. He said it had forestalled a sit-down strike.

This was the second time the U. A. W. officials hailed what they claimed was recognition in Ford plants. In Kansas City, on April 4, Ed Hall, vice president of the U. A. W., said, following a sit-down strike there, "This is the first time in the history of the labor movement that a strike has been successfully consummated against the Ford Motor Co."

Union officers claimed at that time Ford executives had canceled plans for a lay-off as a result of the sit-down.

'Free to Join Anything.'

Two days ago, Henry Ford was quoted as saying his employes were "free to join anything they want to."

Slabey said he had been assured by Richmond plant officials the agreement would be approved. A representative from Ford's Detroit offices attended a two and one-half hour local conference, Slabey added.

Eighty per cent of the 1,700 men employed at the Richmond plant are paid-up union members, Slabey said.

"We were prepared to call a sit-down strike if the conference failed," he declared.

G. M. Reported Seeking to Buy Rail Network

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, of the Senate Railway Investigating Committee, said yesterday he had been consulted by Donaldson Brown, General Motors finance chairman, about a proposal for transferring control of the vast Van Sweringen rail interests to a group headed by General Motors officials.

Brown also is a director of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. George A. Ball, Muncie Ind., glass maker who has controlled the 23,000-mile transportation network since the death of the Van Sweringen brothers, has been reported in negotiations for sale of his stock in Midamerica Corporation, keystone holding company of the Van Sweringen rail empire.

Wheeler emphasized his opposition to holding company domination of railroads, and insisted any change in management should be subjected to scrutiny by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"WHO BANE SISSY, YOU BEEG SVEDE?"
"AY YUST SAY STRONG FALLERS NEFFER DRINK SVEET-TASTING BEER. ONLY WERY DRY BEER-Y KIND BAN GUDE FOR REAL BEER DRINKER!"
A MAN can cook and not be a sissy, but he can't drink sweet beer and get away with it. Not with real beer drinkers. That's why the little cook is being kidded by the big fellow. He knows his beer and he knows that Gunther's is a good, dry, beery beer like the brews he used to get in the old country. The taste for sweet beers is left over from the days of home brew and "needle" beer. But in the old country good beer has always been the dry, beery kind.
And that's why Gunther's—the dry beery beer—is the leading seller in Washington and Maryland combined. And another thing. Real beer drinkers prefer a beer like Gunther's because it's not heavy in body, but light and tangy—the kind that doesn't "fill you up." You can drink more of it without spoiling your appetite for food. It never leaves you feeling dull or heavy the way the sweet prohibition brews did.
Take the advice of a real beer drinker: Switch to a dry, beery beer. Try a glass of Gunther's and learn what satisfaction a real beer can give.

Motorist Dies In Crash as He Pursues Thief

Car Crashes Into Bridge, Overturns and Burns Near Richmond.

Pursuing a man he believed to be a thief, William H. Britt, of 1013 E street southwest, a paperhanger, was killed yesterday when his car smashed into a bridge abutment near Richmond, then overturned and burned.

Britt left his home here against the wishes of his wife and Shannon Moloney, a roomer in his home, to pursue a man roomer in the house whom police believe stole six $100 bills from Miss Moloney.

Britt was heading for Columbia, S. C., to try to capture the suspect, who had made friends with Miss Moloney. The robbery victim told Detective Sergt. Howard Ogle she had 13 $100 bills in her purse on Tuesday, that six of them were missing that night, and her roomer friend was missing the next day. The woman, aged about 60, said he had taken her to church and gained her sympathy, so that she had loaned him money.

She urged Britt to leave the matter in the hands of police and so did his wife, but he insisted on driving to South Carolina. His car hit the bridge near Ashland, Va. His body was so badly burned it took several hours to identify him. He is survived by his wife and four children, James, 9, Donald, 7, Shirley, 5, and Jerry, 3.

Police here have requested South Carolina authorities to arrest the suspect. Local authorities did not disclose his name, but related that he had staged a large party shortly before his departure, explaining his new-found wealth had come to him from a brother.

Hornstein Becomes AllianceClub Head

David Hornstein, local attorney, was installed as president of the Alliance Club of Washington last night at the club's annual installation banquet at the Mayflower Hotel.

Sworn in at the conclusion of the dinner, Hornstein praised the work of Moe Lansbury, retiring president, and said that he would be "in favor of changing the club's name to 'Optimist'" if he were expected to equal Lansbury's record.

"It will be my ambition to devote as much of my time as possible to the betterment of this organization and to bring our members together often in social gatherings, as friendly and cheerful as this one," he concluded.

Other officers installed were F. S. Kogod, vice president; Jacob Sandler, secretary; Louis J. Raebach, treasurer; and Louis Rudden, sergeant at arms.

Negative Orator Wins Court Revision Debate

"If the Administration can't control the ensuing opinions of Supreme Court appointees, then it is proposing to merely clutter the court; if it can control the decisions with advance knowledge of appointees' sentiments, then the men have no business on the bench," was the contention last night of L. N. McGuire, who delivered the winning argument in the Y. M. C. A. Panel's debate on the President's proposed Supreme Court revision.

His was the negative of the subject, "Should the Supreme Court Be Reorganized in Accordance With the President's Proposals?" He was opposed by Benjamin G. Wilkinson, attorney.

Md. Bill to Tax Bookmakers For Relief Is Vetoed by Nice

Governor's Sudden Action Comes as a Surprise, Although He Had Declared He Would Refuse to Sign Bill.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., April 15.—Gov. Harry W. Nice this afternoon vetoed the relief revenue bill passed by the recent Legislature.

The Governor's action at this time came as a surprise. He had announced that he would veto it and call a special session of the Legislature, but it was generally believed he would not take that action for some days yet.

The bill legalized and taxed bookmaking as one of its means of raising revenue for relief. Considerable opposition had arisen to that feature of the measure.

In announcing that he would not approve it, Gov. Nice said several days ago it would not raise sufficient funds to provide for relief. Senate leaders of the Legislature had estimated it would provide $5,000,000 yearly, but Nice said he was advised it would not raise near that amount.

Although Nice has announced he would call the Legislature into special session, he has not yet announced the date. The session is expected to begin next week, probably Thursday.

Earlier, 25 bills passed by the recent Legislature became law as Gov. Nice, the presiding officers and the chief clerks of the two houses of the General Assembly signed them.

Most of the bills were local in nature. Included among Statewide bills which became law were:

Authorizing issuance of $9,052,000 in State bonds to restore $3,300,000 which was diverted from the roads commission to general funds and for other purposes.

Setting the State tax rate at 23 cents per $100 valuation for 1938 and at 23¼ cents for 1939.

Providing that in the future the names of Presidential electors will not be included on ballots in Maryland. Marylanders will vote in the future directly for the Presidential candidates and a vote for a candidate will be counted for each of his eight electors.

Authorizing nonprofit hospital group insurance plans.

Two bills setting up "fair trade" rules for drug and grocery stores. The measures prohibit such stores from selling goods at lower than actual cost.

More than 500 bills passed by the recent Legislature still are before the Governor for action.

Police Seize Man Sought as Robber

Described as a desperate gunman who has robbed stores up and down the Eastern Seaboard, Raymond Service Sutton, 34, of Philadelphia, Pa., was arrested by detectives last night after a chase which ended in the 500 block of F street northwest.

Police said Sutton drew a pistol, at the time of his arrest, but did not use it. On his person was found $511.

According to authorities, Sutton is wanted for automobile and store robberies in Wilmington and Philadelphia. He was being held on the technical charge of investigation last night, while authorities in Pennsylvania and Delaware were notified.

U. S. Finds Defects In 5 Submarines

Design defects in the main generators of five of the Navy's eight submarines under the 1933 building program were reported by the Navy Department yesterday necessitating additional work before the five vessels are put into regular service.

The five submarines, the Porpoise, Pike, Tarpon, Perch and Pickerel, passed their final acceptance trials successfully, but defects in the generators developed during post-trial examinations. Details of the defects were not available.

Two of the other three submarines shortly will begin their shakedown cruises. One, the U. S. S. Plunger, will stop at Washington about June 1, after a trip to the Canal Zone and the west coast of South America.

tion and operation of competing foreign ships. The difficulty of determining foreign costs, which in many cases involve government subsidies, adds to the complexities of the work ahead of the new American commission.

The declaration of national policy in the Merchant Marine act calls for a merchant marine able to carry the domestic water-borne commerce and a "substantial portion" of the foreign trade, capable of serving as a naval or military auxiliary in time or war, owned and operated under the United States flag by American citizens so far as practicable, and composed of the "best-equipped, safest and most suitable types of vessels" constructed in the United States and manned by a "trained and efficient" civilian personnel.

Program Oulined.

Figures compiled by Alfred H. Haag, as chief of the division of shipping research, Shipping Board, Commerce Department, place the United States third among the six principal maritime countries in foreign merchant marine tonnage, being outranked by Great Britain about five to one, with Japan second, Germany fourth and Italy and France fifth and sixth. However, in ships with speeds of 12 knots or more, the United States stood fifth, outranked by Britain six to one, and ahead only of Italy. In ships ten years of age and under, the United States stood at the bottom of the list.

At stake in the merchant marine race is several hundred millions of dollars annually paid in freight and passenger revenues, a considerable portion of which is to be sought for America's national income.

2 Doctors Urge Howard U. Rule For Hospital

Report on Freedmen's Is Sent to House District Unit by Ickes.

Secretary Ickes yesterday transmitted to Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House District Committee, a copy of a report made to him by two physicians recommending that Freedmen's Hospital be placed under the board of trustees of Howard University.

The report was intended to support Ickes' objection, made several weeks ago, to the proposal of the Jacobs fiscal relations committee that Freedmen's Hospital be transferred to the District Board of Public Welfare.

The physicians, Drs. Winford H. Smith and G. Canby Robinson, pointed out that the main purpose of the hospital is to provide a training school for colored doctors. This fact, the report stated, is the only justification for its being maintained by the Federal Government.

Confusion Charged.

It is charged that the administration of the hospital is now confused because the administrative supervisors are appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, while the physicians come from Howard University.

"Under these conditions of divided authority," the report stated, "the functions of the staff cannot be clearly defined and no adequate organization of the hospital is, in our opinion, possible.

"At the present time the quality of the hospital needs to be improved in practically every division and phase of its work if it is to care for patients adequately even without any effort to educate medical students and doctors in conformity with standards now prevailing in these fields in this country.

Unity Recommended.

"We wish to recommend that unity of administration, professional care and medical education be effected and that this be done by placing the responsibility for the conduct of the hospital on the board of trustees of Howard University as agent of the Department of the Interior, the funds as now appropriated for the conduct of the hospital being placed at the disposal of the board of trustees for this purpose."

Adding that the hospital is an essential part of the university medical school, the doctors said:

"There appears to us no other reason why this hospital, caring largely for the Negro patients in the District of Columbia, should be supported by the National Government.

J. H. Steffen Dies; Noted Cameraman

Word was received here yesterday of the death in New York of J. Hal Steffen, 50, news photographer for the New York Herald Tribune, who was widely known in Washington.

One of the veterans of his profession, Steffen joined the staff of the old New York Tribune in 1906, and resigned a short time later to become a free-lance photographer. He returned to the Tribune in 1917 and then joined the staff of the New York Times, being the third photographer hired by the now famous Wide World Photos. For two years Steffen was news editor and photographer for the Keystone Syndicate, and both there and in his other jobs he covered all sorts of news assignments.

Surviving Steffen is his widow, Mrs. Alma Muller Steffen. Funeral services will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock in New York, followed by burial in Old Lutheran Cemetery in Queens.

Senate Clears Way for Action On Half-Billion Navy Measure

By the Associated Press.

The Senate cleared the way yesterday for final Congressional action on a $500,000,000 naval appropriation for the next fiscal year, which includes provision for work on two new battleships.

Senate approval of a conference report left only one item still in dispute between the two Houses—a proposed $5,000,000 outlay for the purchase of a reserve supply of strategic minerals of domestic origin.

A reported tentative compromise to trim this to $3,500,000 led to predictions the measure would be sent to the White House early next week for President Roosevelt's signature.

In the proposed form it would give the Navy $516,258,808 of new funds for the fiscal year starting July 1, and in addition $10,000,000 set aside in 1935 for construction of the world's largest floating drydock for the Pearl Harbor (Hawaii) naval base. This was reappropriated for other naval purposes.

The conference report left intact certain items in the bill specifically allocating funds to Hampton Roads, Va., naval establishments.

These items went through the legislative mill unchanged from the form in which they were in the bill as introduced, and in normal procedure are not subject to further action, although the House has yet to pass on the conference report. Future action is confined to items dealt with in the conference report.

In addition to lump-sum appropriations for operating expenses of the various naval bureaus and establishments, these specific appropriations were made: $260,000 for maintenance and operation of the Norfolk Naval Training Station, an increase of $25,000 over last year; $45,000 for improvement of the Norfolk Navy Yard power plant; $49,300 for repairs to storage buildings at the Norfolk Supply Depot, and $10,000 for a new fire engine at the Norfolk Navy Yard.

Plane to Carry 125 Passengers Being Designed

By the Associated Press.

A Congressional committee heard yesterday that 125-passenger airplanes, almost twice as large as any now in use, already are "on drawing boards."

Col. Edgar S. Gorrell, president of the Air Transport Association of America, gave this information to a House postoffice sub-committee considering proposed revision of the air-mail laws.

"We are flying 22½-ton boats over water," he said, "and have 40-ton boats on order. Ships with a capacity of 125 passengers already are on the drawing boards."

Gorrell told reporters ships capable of carrying about half that number of passengers are operating in Europe, but the larger ones still are in the design stage.

Advocating revision of the air-mail laws to permit the Postoffice Department to "buy what it wants and pay for what it takes," Gorrell protested against a proposed amendment of the law which would require the Interstate Commerce Commission to base air-mail contract rates on anticipated air-mail revenue estimates supplied in advance by the Postoffice Department.

Textile Group Asks Trade Barrier Cut

By the Associated Press.

The world textile conference, after a lively debate on the tariff question, compromised yesterday on a recommendation that "unreasonable" trade barriers be reduced.

Juitsu Kitiako, Japanese government delegate, started the argument after the conference in a closed session had adopted a series of recommendtaions submitted by its economics committee.

Kitiako proposed the additional recommendation "that in the interest of enlarging world trade it is desirable that governments should take every opportunity for removing trade barriers."

AAA Employes Quit Work, Mourn Their Lost Jobs

A short while after some 850 AAA employes had received form-letter notice yesterday terminating their service as of May 1, work virtually suspended in the maze of offices in the Old Postoffice Building while the workers, men and women—some visibly sad, others laughing—held funeral services over their jobs in the lobby.

They placed a somber wreath on the wall, and workers in the machine tabulating division contributed a doll in a coffin with a label: "Quiet death! Funeral services will be held at 12 noon." A sign over an adding machine read: "For rent, Furnished;" another, tacked on a wall, read: "Requiescat in Pace—the Cripple A."

The ceremonies were enlivened by a rush of the building guards on news photographers who took pictures of the doll in the coffin. Chased by the guards, the photographers fled through the door with employes running interference for them."

The form letters precipitating the funeral ceremony read, in part:

"Due to the nearness of completion of the work on which you have been engaged in Washington under the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, I am sorry to notify you that you will be furloughed without pay for a period of three months * * * to take effect at the expiration of such leave of absence with pay as may have accrued in your case, on the basis of 21-6 days for each month of actual service; leave of absence with pay to commence with May 1, 1937.

"The necessity of sending you this notice is deeply regretted," the form letters said, adding that "if in the future the working force is increased, those let out will be considered for reinstatement."

Employe Held In Shortage of Bottling Firm

Arrest Follows Inquiry, Indictment of Pair in $3,000 Deficit.

William Greeley Highfield, 28, 4900 block Illinois avenue northwest, was arrested last night in an investigation of a $3,000 shortage on the books of the Try-Me Bottling Corporation.

Highfield, bookkeeper for the firm, was arrested in the company's offices in the 1300 block Florida avenue northeast, by Detective Sergt. Herbert Wanamaker. He was locked up overnight, but no charge was lodged against him.

Wanamaker said yesterday the arrest of Highfield climaxes an investigation started last November, at which time two drivers for the firm were charged with embazzling small sums.

Harry Thomas Dixon, 33, of the 2100 block Thirtieth street northwest, and William Joseph Plummer, 29, 1200 block F street northeast, were indicted in December on the charges and are at liberty under bonds pending trial.

Police said the men were never tried pending the outcome of the inquiry which resulted in Highfield's arrest.

Jack Papadenes, secretary-treasurer of the firm, asked the aid of police in November, when he suspected misappropriation of money.

2 School Board Members Plan To Quit in June

Dr. Johnson, G. M. Whitwell Say Business Pressure Forces Action.

Two members of the Board of Education, George M. Whitwell and Dr. J. Hayden Johnson, said yesterday they plan to retire when their terms expire June 30.

Declaring that the pressure of business and professional affairs prompteed them to seek retirement, both men reported they had letters from Chief Justice Alfred Wheat, of the District Court of Appeals, informing them that their wishes will be respected.

Resignations of Whitwell and Dr. Johnson follow closely that of Henry Gilligan, who left the board last week.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the board, whose three-year term also expires in June, indicated yesterday she will continue her service if she is reappointed.

Whitwell has been a member of the board since 1931, when he was named to fill the unexpired term of Dr. H. Barrett Learned. He now is chairman of the board's finance committee.

"I have been finding it increasingly difficult to give to school matters the time and attention which should rightly be required of a board member," he said yesterday. He explained that his health was also a factor in his retirement. He just has recovered from a long illness that continued through the last winter.

Dr. Johnson's departure from the board will take from the body its veteran member. He is known as the dean of the board, his length of service exceeding that of any other member. He was appointed in July, 1921, and was a member of the board that brought Dr. Frank W. Ballou to Washington as superintendent of schools. At present he is chairman of the committee on complaints and appeals.

Both Whitwell and Dr. Johnson steadfastly have opposed the "red rider," and have taken an active part in the movement for its repeal.

Gold-Inlaid Razors Discovered In Egyptian Tomb of 4500 B.C.

By the Associated Press.

Cairo, Egypt, April 15.—Archaeologists discovered today rich and valuable examples of Fifth Dynasty art in an ancient Egyptian tomb for which they had conducted a 20-year search.

Decorations and furnishings within the tomb were said to rival those found within the burial place of Ti, a wealthy landowner who lived more than 6,000 years ago.

The tomb in reality is an extension from the tomb of Ti. Selim Hassan found the 16-yard shaft concealed behind a secret door opening from Ti's tomb.

Despite efforts by the builders to keep its location a secret, there were evidences that the burial place had been robbed of some of its objects during the thousands of years.

Demed's body had been removed from its sarcophagus and was lying on the floor. An alabaster offering table in the form of a bull's body and eight alabaster and copper vases and utensils were within the shaft.

The walls were richly decorated and painted with murals of fish, birds and hunting scenes. Many copper utensils and several razors were found, some inlaid with gold leaf.

Mrs. M. A. Turvey Dies in Hospital

Also surviving her are two other daughters, Mrs. H. P. Gill, of this city, and Mrs. Ellsworth Jeffries, Park Lane, Va.; a son, Carl F.; her mother, Mrs. Isabelle Sullivan, of Washington; three sisters, Mrs. George Hunt, of this city; Mrs. Isabelle Simpson, Clarendon, Va., and Mrs. Thomas Smith, New York; four brothers, Cornelius, James and Austin Sullivan, all of Washington, and John Sullivan, of Endicott, N. Y., and five grandchildren.

Bill for Workers' Holidays Offered

A bill to insure wage earners of both sexes of at least one holiday a week was introduced yesterday in the House by Chairman Mary T. Norton of the House District Committee.

Anticipating revival of the District Minimum Wage Board, the measure prohibits Washington employers from working any employe more than six days in any period of seven consecutive days.

Domestic servants and persons over 21 who are holding bona fide executive positions are exempt from the act. Employers would be required to keep accurate accounts of the hours of their employes. Penalties for violation range from $25 to $75.

Pointing Economy Warnings.

The President's economy message has been immediately followed by Secretary Morgenthau's announcement that a new series of weekly bill issues would start next Monday. The purpose is to replenish the Treasury's working cash balance, which has fallen below the level desired by Mr. Morgenthau. But the ominous fact behind this action is that the deficit is still being steadily augmented.

The Administration is disposed to emphasize the disappointing revenue returns as the cause of the rising deficit. But those who examine the statistics of income and outgo note that revenues, though below exaggerated estimates, have brought in over $700,000,000 more to date than during the same period of the preceding fiscal year.

Blame for the deficit rests squarely upon the spending policies of the Government. Elimination of the deficit, therefore, should be sought by curtailment of outlays. Secretary Morgenthau's decision to increase weekly short-term borrowings is a timely and emphatic reminder that a stop must be put to the remorseless rise in the public debt.

The growth of indebtedness is the best means of testing the deterioration of a country's financial position. For a time the current debt increase may seem to lag behind the current deficit either because cash receipts from past borrowing are available for use or because returns from liquidation of capital assets are being utilized. Our Government has met uncovered expenditures in this way, making it difficult to obtain a clear picture of the gap between income and outgo at a given time.

With the Federal debt rapidly approaching $35,000,000,000 and still rising, it is no wonder that Administration leaders are issuing belated warnings and beginning to fly storm signals. Half-hearted measures will not now suffice. The situation demands a drastic slash in appropriations and abstention from every avoidable type of new expense.

Bi-Partisan Boards.

The Senate's failure to confirm the appointment of Murray W. Latimer as a member of the Social Security Board is due to the fact that he is a Democrat. The social security act provides that only two of the three board members may be affiliated with any one political party. As the two members now active are Democrats, Mr. Latimer seems unfortunately disqualified.

Ideally, of course, a man's political affiliations ought not to be considered when appointments to our so-called independent boards and commissions are made. Of primary importance are the technical knowledge and practical experience required for effective discharge of duties on such bodies as the Federal Trade Commission, the Tariff Commission, the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Social Security Board. If an appointee knows what to do and is conscientious in performance of his duties, the public will be well served regardless of his political affiliation.

However, the conditions under which appointments to independent boards and commissions are made are far from ideal. Tremendous pressure is frequently exercised upon the President to secure preference for individuals whose claims are based chiefly on party loyalty. Long terms of appointment, combined with protection against arbitrary removal, offer some defense against the invasion of the spoils system into these independent agencies. But there are, nevertheless, opportunities for grave abuses.

The provision that membership shall be bipartisan relieves the pressure to make appointments regardless of merit. Sometimes, it is true, minority members are selected with the hope that they will serve as docile, timid "yes" men. On the other hand, the bipartisan system may encourage the appointment of the best possible man from the opposition party.

On the whole, it is much better to retain the admittedly imperfect system of bipartisan boards and commissions than to risk a change in methods of appointment that would arouse the spoilsmen to greater efforts and might result in inequitable administration of the law. Representation of both parties, moreover, introduces an element of variety that assists intelligent discussion and well-balanced decisions.

No Decent Respect.

Included in the forthcoming deficiency bill, according to present program, will be a $500,000 item to start construction on the much-criticized Jefferson Memorial. If that appropriation is sanctioned there will be committed perhaps the most irrevocable blunder in city planning ever made by any American municipality. Once this money is available the steam shovels will start their work of demolition among Washington's famous cherry trees. Then it will be too late to protest.

Obviously the half-million dollars now asked is just a starter. Probably twice that sum will be required merely to lay a firm foundation for the proposed mausoleum in the muddy bottom of the Tidal Basin. There has never been any authoritative estimate that the projected plan could be completed for $3,000,000, or even for twice that sum. The idea now is to make a start. For this start would be so hideous to look upon that more and more money would be willingly poured out in an effort to recapture something of the beauty now threatened with such wanton destruction.

In view of the alarming budgetary situation President Roosevelt has called upon all department heads to defer all expenditures not absolutely necessary at the present time. Here is the cue for the Appropriation Committee of the House. By striking this singularly ill-advised and superfluous $500,000 item from the deficiency bill the members of the committee will accomplish a two-fold public service. They will avert an inexcusable waste of public funds. And they will save the national capital from an instance of sheer vandalism which would make the names of those responsible anathema to future generations.

"Boylan's Folly" has already been suggested as the name for the pretentious hulk of marble, with its attendant gridiron of straight streets and formal ponds, which is the approved design for the Jefferson Memorial. This would be a cruel association for the name of a Congressman who has worked long and valiantly to establish a memorial really appropriate to the memory of the author of the Declaration of Independence. But just such tragic outcome is certain to be the result if the monument as planned is allowed to disfigure the site selected. The names of those responsible will all too probably be subjects of contempt, not pride, for future generations.

The extent of the contemplated atrocity is gradually being realized. And with understanding a storm of indignant and heartfelt opposition is gathering force. From the unusually high fee awarded an architect who was protected from any competition, to the ruthless butchery of Washington's most famous beauty spot, there is scarcely one feature of the present plan which is in keeping with the character, the ideals or the personality of Thomas Jefferson. This is so apparent that no public man of any standing is even attempting to justify the star-chamber methods which the commission has used. Yet the unbelievable truth is that a project which will be anathema to the nation is actually on the verge of commencement.

When visitors here are told that the first step toward the Jefferson Memorial will be to rip out every cherry tree around the Tidal Basin, they just laugh. None can at first believe that such incredible folly is actually about to be perpetrated. Yet this is only the beginning of Boylan's Folly. The total wreckage contemplated would be strewn over acres of ground, over years of time, at a cost of millions of dollars. The commission, in the restrained words of Congressman Scott, of California, "would go into an already completely and beautifully developed area, Potomac Park, and scramble up a layout that is a joy and treat."

To the plentitude of arguments against the pending scheme Mr. Scott has added another which is very cogent. It would, he justly points out, be a flagrantly gratuitous insult to the Japanese people to rip up the cherry trees which thirty years ago they presented to this country as a living, growing, symbol of friendship and goodwill. To uproot these older trees is to kill them. And to kill them wantonly would be an action as crudely offensive, as far from the spirit of the good neighbor, as any government could perpetrate in times of peace.

No American ever had a higher sense of social responsibility than Thomas Jefferson possessed. "A decent respect to the opinions of mankind," he wrote at the beginning of the Declaration of Independence, required a listing of the causes of that action. The whole procedure of the misnamed Jefferson Memorial Commission does violence to the memory of the man they claim to honor. A decent respect for the opinions of mankind today requires an entirely fresh start in this grossly mismanaged undertaking.

A Federal Broadcasting Tax.

Commissioner George Henry Payne of the Federal Communications Commission advocates special taxation of broadcasting stations on the ground that they enjoy enormous profits and benefit from the use of a great national resource while the burden of regulation rests entirely upon the Government. A bill embodying his plan has been sent to Congressman Boylan for introduction.

The commissioner's arguments, reenforced by statistics showing the extraordinarily profitable nature of the broadcasting business, are undoubtedly strong. It is pointed out that, with an estimated investment of not over $40,000,000, gross revenues from broadcasting exceeded $107,000,000 last year and may amount to as much as $130,000,000 during the present year. Several stations, it is said, have recently been sold for several times the amount invested—in one case for between seven and eight times the invested capital.

Under such conditions, an industry whose very existence depends upon governmental regulation may properly be called upon to make a special contribution, provided the tax is not unduly burdensome and not excessive in relation to the value of the special privileges enjoyed. The proposed levy, graded in accordance with the amount of power utilized, does not appear to be onerous. Estimates indicate that it would amount to less than 6 per cent of gross revenues. While receipts, estimated at close to $7,000,000, would be several times the amounts appropriated for the Federal Communications Commission, the sum is, as Commissioner Payne states, a "small return for the great privilege the industry enjoys in using the people's air waves."

The additional revenue, moreover, would be welcome to the Government in view of the state of public finances. Any tax that is easy to assess, inexpensive to collect, and not unduly burdensome is a blessing not to be despised, even if the yield is inconsiderable judged by present-day revenue needs and spending standards.

Power And Responsibility.

The success achieved by the C. I. O. in organizing large numbers of workers in the automobile, steel and other mass-production industries is a tribute both to the prescience and to the skill of John L. Lewis.

Earlier, and more clearly than the general run of American labor leaders, he realized that industrial and social trends favor the widespread unionization of unskilled and semiskilled labor. H was also shrewd in his conclusion that for mass-production industries the industrial type of unonism is much more logical than the old craft-union type. Indeed many employers had unwittingly done the spade-work for the C. I. O., by establishing in their plants company unions embracing in their membership men engaged in every variety of occupation within a particular plant.

Events have now confirmed the value of the Lewis strategy. In every great industrial center workers by the hundreds have been joining unions organized by the C. I. O. Already very considerable concessions have been secured by these unions. For these victories Mr. Lewis can take no small measure of credit. He has been the driving force behind the movement. He has demonstrated exceptional qualities as an organizer and as a leader.

Paradoxically, the very successes scored by the C. I. O. constitute the chief danger to that organization. Particularly is that true since the group of Supreme Court opinions which uphold the national labor relations act and flatly assert that "refusal (of employers) to confer and negotiate (with unions) has been one of the most prolific causes of (industrial) strife." The complete indorsement of collective bargaining which makes labor organization so much easier also increases the need for that sense of responsibility which is the inseparable twin of power.

Students of industrial relations will now closely watch the activities of the C. I. O. to determine whether a capacity for self-restraint is developing simultaneously with the growth of its strength. There is encouragement in the statement of Homer Martin, president of the Automobile Workers Union, that "a strike to force Henry Ford to recognize the U. A. W. U. will not be necessary now." But there must also be a positive repudiation by the C. I. O. unions of the sit-down strike technique, the only possible excuse for which was the arbitrary anti-union attitude which the Supreme Court has now repudiated. How easily the sit-down strike may lead to violence has been illustrated anew in the pitched battle that took place in Detroit Wednesday.

The C. I. O. has made many enemies, largely through its use of the sit-down. It is the counsel of wisdom for it not to alienate more public support than it can help. And the only way to avoid very material antagonism is for the leadership to show that it knows how to temper power with a keen sense of public responsibility.

The Bible tells us that Samson was strong enough to wreck the temple of the Philistines. It also tells us that he was buried beneath the ruins.

"How can a man who has been married for years deceive his wife?" asks a minister. It's a problem, brother; a tough problem.

From the Montgomery Advertiser.

You feel meanest when you refuse a man a dime to buy food. He says he is hungry. He says he will spend the money for a hot dog and a glass of milk. Your clothes are fresh, you are healthy and employed. He is unkempt, although, strange to relate, in nine cases out of ten, he looks healthy and vigorous.

That is what raises a doubt in your mind as to hunger. You know from experience that although he may eat food if you buy it, just to make the right impression, frequently he is not hungry and does not expect food—he really guesses that you will give him money and not put him on the spot. You know this to be a moral certainty, because of your experience with the law of averages. But you are yet a little doubtful. You are tired of being imposed upon by unworthy mendicants, and so from time to time you have said that you would be firm, even hardboiled.

And so you say no you have no change, and walk on, wondering if you are a worthy human being. Your sense tells you that you are all right, but your human sympathies leave you a little in doubt. After all, a dime isn't much.

Freedom Of The Press.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems strange that none of the newspaper publishers have yet sensed the significance of the decision of the Supreme Court in the Associated Press case. It appears to the undersigned that the decision abrogates in effect the Bill of Rights of the Constitution, particularly Article 5 thereof regarding due process of law, and the provision that "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people;" and also the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, to say nothing of the constitutional guarantee of the right of freedom of contract, which is a most important liberty intended to be protected by the Constitution.

In view of the fact that newspapers circulate in States other than that where published, every newspaper in the United States is now subject to the jurisdiction of the National Labor Relations Board, and the freedom of the press, guaranteed by the Constitution, is in very grave jeopardy. A newspaper cannot now fire an editor, if he happens to belong to a writers' guild, for persisting in writing editorials inconsistent with the policies of the paper, and so another constitutional guarantee, so indispensable to liberty and the maintenance of popular government, is also "gone with the wind."

After this decision we might as well be reconciled with the proposal to pack the court for it is doubtful if the court as reconstituted could go any further in "liberal construction," or should it be said—destruction?

And More On The Jefferson Memorial

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Fine campaign you are conducting to point out to the people of the Nation what a silly thing it is for public money to be spent in great amount for a Jeffersonian Memorial to be erected in the middle of the Tidal Basin.

Pitiless publicity will expose to the country what a ridiculous project this is, particularly when the country is so bad off that it has to spend millions of dollars for relief.

If they want to spend that much kale why don't they do something practical with the money? I have been impressed with the great need of facilities to abate the great spread of syphilis and what could be of more a memorial to Thomas Jefferson than the erection of a great clinic whereby those thousands of cases, now not being able to be properly treated, could be cured. Is not the saving of thousands of lives of not only this generation, but future generations, much more important than sticking a pile of marble out in the Potomac to recall Thomas Jefferson as a great man? I think so and wonder how any reasonable-minded person could think otherwise. It took the series of Post articles to explain to thousands of Washingtonians how meager the existing facilities for taking care of syphilis are here, and most of us wonder why such a condition is allowed to go along unchecked to any great extent.

Jefferson has been dead many years and Monticello is a private shrine. Why don't these zealous lovers of Jefferson do something about making Monticello a national shrine if they are really interested in establishing a romantic memorial? It would be much more tasteful than the rock pile in the Potomac.

HARRY HAAS.
Washington, April 14.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please accept my thanks for your splendid editorial of April 7, "No More Cherry Blossoms." Is it possible that the beautiful Tidal Basin with its wealth of flowers and its scenic loveliness is about to be destroyed? Can nothing be done about it? Cannot a mass meeting of the citizens be called to protest this outrage?

President Roosevelt has "requested" of Congress $500,000 to begin this destruction, a mere trifle in this age of reckless spending. Of course, Congress will grant the money. It would agree to tear down the White House and build a modern apartment in its place if the gentleman who is temporarily occupying that historic mansion should "request" it.

Incidentally, what about the Thomas Jefferson School in Southeast Washington? It is one of the oldest and most inadequate public school buildings in the city.

C. K. M.
Washington, April 14.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Everyone is doing it, so why should I, too, not enter into this "free advice" giving about the Jefferson Memorial? I am a Virginian, in spirit, anyway, and naturally love everything connected with Thomas Jefferson, and am so proud of him. He was a scholar, a gentleman, an aristocrat and a veritable father to his State and country. He deserves a memorial, but not one that will cost $5,000,000!

The Pope memorial plan is very beautiful, but so thoroughly inappropriate to Jefferson. He does not need such a one. His memorial is in himself. His lovely shaft erected in the woods at Monticello is enough, but if we must honor him why not take the Declaration of Independence over to the Archives Building, put it in that circular room on a specially designed and appropriate pedestal? At the back of this room beneath the space where those two beautiful murals come together place a rather heroic figure of Jefferson facing the Declaration of Independence. It certainly would not cost $5,000,000.

What document have we that is so valuable? Why not honor it at the same time that we honor Jefferson? It would be so beautiful that way and so appropriate.

VIRGINIA.
Washington, April 13.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Those who wonder what Thomas Jefferson himself might think of the proposal to cut down trees to make way for his memorial may find the answer in the attached quotation from "Washington: Capital and City; American Guide Series, 1937; page 23:

Thomas Jefferson, while President, was outraged by the cutting down of the Mall trees and did much to save and restore the natural beauty of the city. He planted Lombardy poplars, because of their "most sudden growth," along Pensylvania avenue, and often gathered and planted seeds and seedlings in other spots. In 1815 the first city ordinance calling for an appropriation expressly for trees was passed, stipulating the planting of 400 English elms to replace the poplars along Pennsylvania avenue. These in turn were replaced by lindens, oaks, maples, sycamores and other varieties.

Until the middle of the century, small appropriations were made annually for tree planting, and Washington began to be known as one of the few capitals of the world distinguished for sylvan beauty. No really important step, however, was taken after Jefferson's time until about 1872, when the first systematic municipal tree planting was begun under Alexander R. Shepherd, carrying out the intentions of Washington and L'Enfant.

S. B. ANDERSON.

Men And Women.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just returned from a Saturday afternoon matinee largely attended by children. A thought-provoking incident took place which I feel like submitting to parents, teachers, school administrators, and all groups and individuals interested in character training.

At one point in the movie story in which a woman is brought to trial for the murder of her husband and later acquitted a juror prefaced his opinion as to her guilt or innocence by remarking, "All my life I have been taught to respect Woman." I was astounded at the spontaneous outburst of boos which followed, coming from a section of the theater in which a large number of boys, perhaps 10 to 14 years of age, were seated.

Being a woman I felt provoked, not because I think all women are respectable, but because women as a whole—the mothers, wives, and daughters of the race—were publicly devaluated and degraded by striplings! How do modern boys, who should know something of the notable achievements of women and the enviable records modern girls are making, develop such a state of mind? Are such thought habits fostered in public schools? Not directly, I am sure, but indirectly, I believe, through an overemphasis in curricula of masculine achievement.

Are parents partial to their sons, making them feel superior to their daughters? Or are boy babies born with a superiority complex which functions involuntarily from a background of centuries of custom and tradition? We are all familiar with the "sissy" accusation often hurled by boys of a very tender age.

Every child should be taught the interrelatedness of life in simple language. In a sense we are all equally important. We rise or fall together since the interests of men, women, and children are inextricably bound together. If this truth were faithfully taught to youth such a spectacle as I witnessed this afternoon would not happen. There should be more magazines like "Parade of Youth," the excellent publication devoted to the outstanding achievements of both girls and boys, which The Post distributes with its Sunday edition.

PHARE PLEIGH.
Washington, April 10.

Tired of "Foreign Ideas."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Sit-down strikes are unlawful and un-American and soon the American people will be so aroused that they will not tolerate them.

What is the nationality of John L. Lewis and other labor agitators? How many United States Senators and Representatives, if any, are natives of foreign countries? Who are they?

The people are beginning to get tired of foreign disturbers and foreign ideas. I am telling you that we are getting tired of a Socialist Government. Socialization is dangerous. I am not a politician but I am interested in my country first—party means nothing, although I voted the Democratic ticket.

H. J. POPE.
Weldon, N. C., April 10.

The Ludlow Bill.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With the threatening war clouds gathering in Europe and the impotency of the League of Nations as a preventative apparent, it seems to me that now is the moment when those who will have the fighting to do should be heard. I don't believe we would have any need to fear war if it was left to the fighters to decide. For that reason I am writing to urge Post readers to use their influence to get favorable action on Representative Louis Ludlow's bill to keep us out of foreign wars.

Should we be drawn into such a brawl as is being waged in Spain, then we need not be surprised if we ape Russia. Nothing will help more to prevent such a happening than the passing of a law leaving the final war decision to the voters.

PERRY F. SKINNER.

Monumental Architecture

Following is an extract from a new book, "Modern Building: Its Nature, Problems and Forms," by Walter Curt Behrendt. Dr. Behrendt, born in Germany, became the first editor of Die Form in 1925. He had been in charge of governmental housing in Prussia until 1925, and from 1925 to 1933 he served in the Prussian ministry of finance in charge of the erection of all governmental buildings. He is now teaching at Dartmouth College.

NOW, as to the results of these manifold efforts toward developing new building types, the architectural experiments, of course, have been furthest advanced, almost to a definite solution, in all those tasks where the architect has been faced with a clear program of demands, precisely defining the use and purpose for which the building is thought of; that is to say, in such types as factories, office buildings, department stores and all those projects which need for their solution a sturdy and resolved realism.

On the other hand, these attempts have been, if not a total failure, at any rate not successful, with those types of building which by nature and destination need a monumental character. There have been in church architecture, for instance, many experiments toward modernizing the traditional types. Religion, however, is no longer what it once was, namely the center of everybody's life and conceptions in response to needs common to the entire community. And so the modernism of present-day church architecture appears to be a rather irrelevant demonstration, limited to the outer aspect and consisting merely in the application of modern methods of construction and building materials, such as steel, concrete and glass.

An illuminating light on the situation is thrown when a new church, built in Dusseldorf in 1936 by Otto Bartning, and making conspicuous uses of all the processes and materials of modern technique, is called "Steel Church," whereas in former times all churches used to be called by the names of saints.

As a matter of fact modern building demonstrates a lack of sense for monumentality, and the same is true of present-day sculpture. But to be just, this lack is to be charged not to the impotence of modern art, but rather to the general spirit of the age. All monumental art is in the nature of a symbol, expressing, representing or recalling in its forms common ideas or conceptions of general consent, and therefore understood by everybody.

This situation was clearly, and in an almost pathetic way, illuminated when Heinrich Tessenow built the War Memorial in Berlin, in 1931, if not the most successful, certainly the most honest attempt toward a solution of this difficult and in our time so ungrateful problem. In a large, square hall, which gets its light through a circular opening in the ceiling, he erected a simple square block of granite stone with a wreath of oak leaves, made of bronze, on its top. The interior is of the utmost possible simplicity, because for us only the very simple is the very true. The effect of the Memorial Hall is as strong as severe.

When the building was finished this effect was felt in governmental circles as not affording that sort of emotional appeal to which they were accustomed, and the architect, strictly rejecting the proposal that he add some adornment, was finally asked whether he would agree upon an inscription for adorning the walls. "Gentlemen," he answered, "I am ready to compromise, if you can find a text of a unifying character for that inscription." The gentlemen went to work, turning about the Bible and the works of the heroes of German literature, but they did not succeed in finding a single sentence which was not apt to rouse the flaming protests of one or the other side. The inscription finally chosen for the memorial had to be limited to a few abstract figures, to a common symbol, indeed, exonerated from any disrupting potentialities and beyond the reach of diverging opinions. It simply reads "1914-1918."

It is, in fact, the general spirit of the age which is not capable of, and what is more, not even longing for, the monumental. This strange phenomenon had already been observed by Karl Friedrich Schinkel more than a century ago. In an attempt to interpret his observations made on a journey to England, he wrote the following note: "The new time takes everything easy. There is no longer any belief in the absolute. And having realized too clearly the perishableness of all nature, we know that everything is soon going to change its structure. And so has been lost the sense for the monument."

Besides this psychological reason, however, there is still another and even stronger one of a sociological nature, related to the change of society from an aristocratic to a democratic order. Whereas an aristocratic society indulges in erecting all kinds of monuments, using them as symbols to impress on the people the static character of the social building, a democratic society whose structure, based on the concept of organic order, is of dynamic character, has no use and therefore no desire for the monument. Be that as it may, Schinkel's statement has been proved true by the facts: since it was written, almost no monument has been erected that by its artistic qualities stands the test.

Fair Enough

Miami.

FLORIDA is about to suffer another real estate boom, thanks in part to the talk of inflation, so here, for your information, is the story of the man who was the greatest promoter and the most spectacular victim of the last one.

Between 1920 and 1925 George E. Merrick sold $150,000,000 worth of real estate in the development known as Coral Gables. A couple of years ago he was broke so flat that when he inherited a little patch of land down on the Keys he cleared it by hand, built a few shacks and ran a fishing camp for tourists.

Barefoot and in canvas pants, he toted baggage for lack of a few dollars to hire a porter and did all the chores himself, while his wife, who had given up her home and her jewels, did the cooking and cleaning.

Mr Merrick is now back in action with a new real estate firm, but he says it is his hope to keep things under control this time. He claims to be an idealist, not an exploiter, with a preference for the sort of settler who will take a stake in the community and settle down to work, produce and develop the State.

The other kind come down merely for a good time and to establish residence for no other reason than to dodge taxes levied on big incomes and fortunes in their home communities.

Well, so much for that.

* * * *

MR. MERRICK led off with a tract of 160 acres which his father bought for $1,000 in 1898 and reached out, acquiring more land at pyramiding prices, until it looked as though he was trying to start not merely a new town but a new country.

He built a city of 1,000 homes, a hospital, a city hall, a power plant, seven hotels and a street car line with 40 miles of track. He paved streets and laid sidewalks and mains and planted decorative light poles along miles of winding avenues. He dug a canal to provide a waterway for yachts from the sea to the inland Miami-Biltmore Hotel. The hotel cost, with its two golf layouts, its swimming pool and all, a little over $7,000,000.

He also built a stucco cloister known as Miami University to provide ready-made culture for his tailor-made town. This institution, after years of struggle against many handicaps, including the derisive name of Cardboard College, now has 1,200 students, most of them from elsewhere.

Many Americans will remember, some of them with acute pain in the region where their bankrolls used to be, the amazing advertising and sales campaign of the Merrick promotion at Coral Gables. It was a big, complicated company by this time with Wall Street involvements, and Mr. Merrick's grasp on the show was very infirm.

He hired William Jennings Bryan for two years at $50,000 a year to ballyhoo the property to nibblers at public meetings held in the Venetian pool, a pretty civic swimming hole which is still in operation today.

* * * *

MR. MERRICK had offices scattered around a territory bounded by New Orleans, St. Louis, and Chicago on the west and New York on the north, with 3,000 salesmen and a fleet of 86 road-hog omnibuses carrying 35 passengers each, to roll the prospects down the line free, if the salesman certified them as live ones.

Bryan found himself giving his Florida lecture to about 200 new lives ones every day at the Venetian pool, but it can't be alleged that he did them dirt, because who knows but that he believed his own stuff?

He was a money lover, to be sure, and along toward the end of the boom Mr. Merrick had to lay the cash on the line before Mr. Bryan would chirp a single note. But he could have believed what he said, because, after all, most of it concerned the sunshine and the fertility of the soil, which nobody can deny.

Rex Beach got $20,000 for a small book about Merrick and Coral Gables, and this, too, was ballyhoo, but reading its painted pages today no man can disagree with his descriptive stuff or his facts.

* * * *

A HOTEL PROMOTER was signed on at $100,000 a year to run the Biltmore and became so inflamed with the promotion that he took chips in the game himself, which were swept away in the crash.

Coral Gables spent more than $3,000,000 for advertising in four years. They were powerful ads, for they pulled business until land was changing hands on nominal options with so little money down that the thing became fantastic. Merrick was paying 30 per cent for money at the end, and the building of homes had ceased in favor of sheer gambling in lots.

Merrick could have cleared out for $15,000,000 in 1925, but he hung around until he learned how it felt to be a man without a dollar—not a dollar to his name—in a community where once he had ruled the earth. Mr. Beach's book on George Merrick was fine as far as it went, but it closed just a few months too soon for its most dramatic chapter.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Imaginary Interviews. Mr. Lewis and Mr. Ford.

John—How are you, Henry?

Henry—Oh, I'm able to sit up.

John—Never mind about that; how are you on sitting down?

Henry—You'll find out.

* * * *

John—You are quoted as saying the C. I. O. will never unionize the Ford plants. Did you really say that or was it just a case of your motor skipping?

Henry—I said it and I mean it. I'll close my shops first.

Henry—Where do you get off unionizing auto plants? I thought you were a coal miner.

John—Oh, I was a coal miner, but I figured in an accident. Everything went black and when I woke up I was unionizing everything.

Henry—What was the accident?

John—The Republicans named Landon to run against Roosevelt.

* * * *

Henry—This sit-down stuff makes me sick. Nobody ever makes any progress sitting down.

* * * *

Henry—Suppose I had spent all my time sitting instead of slaving away to perfect the Model T?

John—Henry, you contributed more to the art of sitting down than anybody in industrial history. Lizzie took the entire country off its feet.

Henry—Why are you determined to start a row in my plants? I've always paid labor the highest wages.

John—I promised Chrysler and Sloan that I wouldn't show any partiality.

* * * *

Henry—Strikes are too costly. I can't afford to include 'em within my price range.

John—Nonsense. I've got 'em down where anybody can afford 'em. I can turn out a dozen big strikes for what it once cost to produce one little one, and I got the idea basically from you.

Henry—How so?

John—Quantity production!

* * * *

Henry—I was the first man to adopt a five-dollar minimum wage in this country; I pioneered the higher wages movement in industry. The workers of America never forget.

John—That shows what you know about workmen. I'll unionize your business if it's the last thing I do.

Henry—If you try it, it will be the LAST thing you'll do!

John—Five dollars a day! Why, I pay my valet, my butler, my private secretary, my chauffeurs and my gardener more than that.

Henry—So you have a valet and a butler?

John—Shush! Not so loud!

* * * *

Henry—The whole idea of you presuming to dictate to me is offensive. Why, I'd have you understand I began life as a penniless mechanic and became the greatest industrialist in the world.

John—That's nothing. I went from the coal mines to the Presidency of the United States.

Henry—Presidency of the United States! I thought Roosevelt had that job.

The Fulpan Plan To End Droughts

Biddlesville Professor And Congressman Consult.

By Louis M. Jiggitts.

Biddlesville, March 3, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I have been giving considerable thought during the past few weeks to a feasible plan to end the droughts in the West and at the same time prevent floods in the East and the South, and I believe I have found the solution. I am writing to you as one of the leaders who shape the policies of our great country in the belief that you will be interested in this great problem.

Please let me know if you care to hear further.

Yours very truly,
PERCIVAL FOGG, B. S., M. S.

Washington, D. C., March 6, 1937.

Professor Percival Fogg,
Biddlesville.
Dear Prof. Fogg:

We have several plans before us at present to meet the problems mentioned in your recent communication, but I am always interested in the suggestions of my constituents.

I assure you that it will be a pleasure to give your plan my closest consideration.

Yours very truly,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Biddlesville, March 8, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.,
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I propose to use an elaborate system of hydraulic rams to pump water out of the Mississippi River at its confluence with the Ohio near Cairo into vast reservoirs for the purpose of distribution over the drought area, when, as and if necessary.

If you feel justified in going into the plan, please let me know. Frankly, I do not care to divulge, it until it will be seriously considered by those in power.

The hydraulic rams will be used, of course, to cut down operating costs to the minimum. I realize the necessity of economy.

Yours very truly,
PERCIVAL FOGG, B. S., M. S.

Washington, D. C., March 11, 1937.

Professor Percival Fogg,
Biddlesville.
My Dear Prof. Fogg:

Your interesting letter arrived in the absence of the Congressman, who is in conference on an important measure before Congress, but I can assure you that he is deeply interested in any plan that can prevent floods and droughts. And I am certain that he will approve economizing with hydraulic rams. The Congressman, as you know, is a champion of economy, and is deservedly known as the taxpayers' friend.

You may rest assured that you will be divulging your plan to sympathetic ears. Yours very truly,
WILLA DOOLITTLE, Secretary.

Biddlesville, March 13, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

As you know, the hydraulic ram pumps one cubic foot of water for ten cubic feet of water that passes through it, and for every foot dropped the ram pumps the water ten feet or more in the air. Therefore, if you have a droppage of, say 35 feet, you will pump the water 350 feet in the air. In other words, 100 cubic feet of water passing through the system of hydraulic rams with a 35-foot droppage would pump 10 cubic feet of water 350 feet high.

As you will recall, more than 1,000,000 cubic feet of water passed by Cairo each second during the recent flood. With a system of rams such as I have in mind, you could have pumped 100,000 cubic feet of water 350 feet high every second into the reservoir, that is, 60,000,000 cubic feet per minute or 360,000,000 cubic feet per hour. The reservoir would be a huge tank, which would have outlets carrying the water to the drought areas. What do you think of this?

Yours very truly,
PERCIVAL FOGG, B. S., M. S.

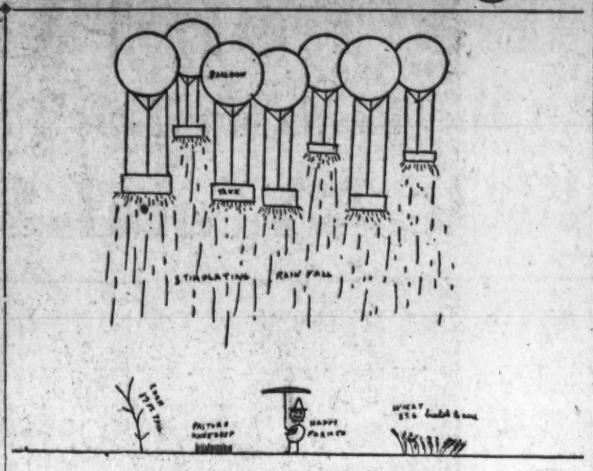
Washington, D. C. March 16, 1937.

Professor Percival Fogg,
Biddlesville.
My Dear Prof. Fogg:

The Congressman had to return to conference again this morning, but he instructed me to inform you that he is interested in your plan. However, he would like to know how you intend to distribute the water to the drought area.

Yours very truly,
WILLA DOOLITTLE, Secretary.

P. S. Your sketch was interesting, but your tank looks larger than Cairo.



"The balloons, thousands of them, will then ascend . . ."

Biddlesville, March 18, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

The water will be distributed from the primary reservoir tank by pipes or aqueducts such as the old Romans used during the heydey of the Roman empire. The aqueducts or pipes would carry the water from this tank 350 ft. high for considerable distances. If the water had to be conveyed to greater heights in places, a system of pumps would be used. Of course, the tank would not be as large as Cairo, probably just half as large. While the hydraulic ram would be pumping water into it (the tank, not Cairo) constantly, the water would be running off through the pipes or aqueducts as shown by the enclosed illustration.

Yours very truly,
PERCIVAL FOGG, B. S., M. S.

Washington, D. C. March 20, 1937.

Professor Percival Fogg,
Biddlesville.
My dear Professor Fogg:

Your letter arrived during the continued absence of the Congressman, but I am certain that he is deeply interested in the plan. I feel sure, however, that he would like to know where you would get the old Roman aqueducts. Wouldn't it be expensive to transport them from Rome, and would Mr. Mussolini let them out of the country?

Yours very truly,
WILLA DOOLITTLE, Secretary.

P. S.—The Congressman will also want to know if the hydraulic ram is efficient.

Biddlesville, March 22, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I regret that you are so busy that you can not personally attend to a matter of vast importance to the country. If you are interested let me know at once, otherwise I shall submit the plan to one of our senators. I had thought that the honor should go to you for your valued services to the Nation during your long tenure in office, and that it would be known in the years to come as the Fulpan Plan.

Your secretary wants to know where we shall get the aqueducts. Of course, I had no intention of using the same old aqueducts from which Caesar quenched his thirst.

The hydraulic ram is from 82 to 90 per cent efficient.

I have an invention which may make it 96.3 per cent efficient, for the present you may call this the Fogg X, which should be added to both sides of either equation.

I trust that this will give you an adequate idea of its efficiency.

Yours very truly,
PERCIVAL FOGG, B. S. M. S.

Washington, D. C. March 24, 1937.

Prof. Percival Fogg,
Biddlesville.
Dear Prof. Fogg:

I sincerely regret that I have been compelled to work so strenuously during the past few weeks. But my position here as one of the leaders has made it impossible for me to relax, even for the hour I formerly devoted to the mechanical horse at the House gymnasium.

I am rather interested in your plan. I can understand how you will reduce the water in the rivers, and how this water will be conveyed to the drought area. But how will you distribute it so as to reach the effected sections most beneficially? And I should like to know what the approximate cost will be if you can estimate it at present.

I appreciate your explanation of the efficiency of the hydraulic ram.

Assuring you that I am awaiting your reply with great interest, I am

Your friend,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Biddlesville, March 26, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

My plan to distribute the water most beneficially over the effected areas is not by irrigation canals as attempted in the past. My plan is entirely new and quite feasible. The water will be carried from the primary reservoir to certain branch reservoirs throughout the drought area. From these branch reservoirs tanks carried by controlled balloons will be filled with the water. The balloons, thousands of them, will then ascend and the water will be released through sprinklers attached to the tanks, thus giving the effect of a stimulating rainfall.

I am sure you realize that a number of balloons, say two thousand five hundred at a time, could cause a fair rainfall in any given locality. The enclosed illustration will give you an idea.

The cost, in my opinion, will not be over $8,000,000,000. If you are interested, please let me know and I will send you a draft of the bill which you can introduce as the Fulpan Plan.

Yours sincerely,
PERCIVAL FOGG, B. S. M. S.

P. S. I am delighted to learn that your mind is also mechanical.

P. S. The balloons could be used to sprinkle poison on the grasshoppers when rain is not needed.

Dear Friend Fogg:

I am becoming convinced that your plan will prove feasible. It may be the solution of the ages, and I congratulate you upon your intelligent treatment of a vastly intricate problem. Please let me have the draft of the bill as soon as possible.

I shall feel honored to have it known as the Fulpan Plan.

My Dear Congressman Fulpan:

Your letter addressed to my Cousin Percival arrived today. I regret to inform you that on yesterday, dear Percival was recommitted to the State Institution.

He was formerly a professor of mechanical engineering at Hopeful College, but some years ago it was found necessary to commit him. Several months ago he was released in the belief that he was cured. But lately he has been talking of a grandiose scheme of flood and drought control. We became suspicious then. When he began to read the Congressional Record every day our suspicions were confirmed. And when he declared a few days ago that his great plan for flood and drought control would actually be introduced in Congress we knew it was best to have him recommitted without delay.

What disposition shall I make of the unopened letter which I have?

Duce Is Revealed As Averting Reich Break With Pope

Vatican City, April 15 (AP).—The German government softened the tone of its reply to Pope Pius' Easter attack, a reliable informant declared today, at the urging of Premier Mussolini.

Mussolini conveyed to Hitler an appeal to avoid any dispute with the Vatican, this source said, over the German-Vatican concordat of 1933 which the Pope charged had been violated.

His encyclical to German bishops March 21 declared the Nazi administration had made the concordat "intrinsically valueless" and contained an inferred charge that the Reichsfuehrer might seek to become spiritual as well as governing head of his nation.

Father Tacchi Venturi, who effected peace between Mussolini and the pontiff in 1929, carried the Italian premier's appeal to Hitler, it was said here.

Consequently, the German reply was described as "polite and courteous" although firm in its contention that Catholic youth organizations in Germany had exceeded their jurisdiction.

Fla. House Body Balks On Child Labor Law

Tallahassee, Fla., April 15 (AP).—The constitutional amendments committee of the Florida House voted 13 to 5 today against ratification of the child labor amendment to the Federal Constitution. Such action usually is tantamount to defeat of a proposal.

London Letter

By David Wills

England In Conference.

London.

ENGLAND is in conference. All over the country the delegates are viewing with alarm and pointing with pride. The seaside resorts, the beauty spots, the watering places, the mere towns are welcoming the annual conferences of pretty near everything that could find an excuse for an annual conference. Public opinion is in the making.

The political conferences of the Independent Labor Party, the Independent Socialists, the Co-operative Party, the League of Young Liberals, the Trade Union conferences of the National Amalgamated Union of Shop Assistants, Warehousemen and Clerks, the Distributive and Allied Workers; the education conferences of the National Union of Teachers, the National Association of Schoolmasters, the School Attendance and Investigation Officers National Association, the Institute of Handicraft Teachers; the miscellaneous and assorted conferences of the National Federation of Sub-Postmasters, the Incorporated Society of Registered Naturopaths, the International Order of Good Templars, the National Union of Commercial Travelers, the Astrologers Convention, the National Council of Corporation Tenants' Associations and the National Union of Journalists; all discuss their pet problems and all discuss politics.

Missing from the list is that austere-sounding organization with a hint about it of Spanish Inquisition and star chamber: the Society of Correctors of the Press. Messrs. Hitler and Mussolini must surely be honorary perpetual exalted masters of the art of correcting the press!

* * * *

AT ALL the political and most of the trade unions conferences the main themes were criticism of the national government, outspoken support for the Spanish government and the fight for democracy in Spain, bitter attack on the official Labor Party leaders and the officials of the Trades Union Council for their apparent support for the national government and their heresy hunts among the ranks of the left-wing parties.

The ruling powers of the national organization of the trades unions which finance and therefore rule the Parliamentary Labor Party, have strengthened their grip on the movement by two standing orders: No union is permitted to send as a delegate to the national committee any member of the union who is also a member of the Communist part, the independent Labor Party, the Socialist League. Since most criticism of the labor policies comes from these bodies, criticism is stifled at the start. And if a trade union adopts a policy by the slightest of margins, its delegates can vote the whole strength of the union in favor of the accepted policy. This gives great power to the delegates of the large unions. Both these practices were condemned in annual conferences, since they tend to aggravate the conservatism of the national political organization and to swamp more active criticism in the various local union branches.

* * * *

THE ECONOMIC AFFAIRS most frequently discussed were the lot of the "distressed areas" and the need for more generous insurance. There was general condemnation of the government's official policy of solving the troubles of the distressed areas by presenting them with armament factories. The I. L. P. undertook actively to expose the object of such plans and their economic social and political results.

The Distributive and Allied Workers plumped for a 40-hour week in one resolution, a 48-hour week in another, old-age pensions of £1 a week at 55 and superannuation of £1 a week at 60.

The more cautious Co-operators referred back to the national executive proposals to support a flat-rate pension of £1 a week for all at 60 years of age, and a 40-hour industrial week with no reduction in wages; the executive was instructed to examine the economic costs of these proposals, and to bear in mind the government's intention to spend £1,500,000,000 on arms within the next five years.

The sub-postmasters pointed to the scandal of their low wages: Six thousand and five hundred of them receive less than £1 a week, less in fact than the subsistence wage set by public assistance boards. The sub-postmasters, not choosing to be greedy, called for a minimum wage of £52 a year.

* * * *

THE LEAGUE of Young Liberals supported free trade, a strong League of Nations, an agricultural policy which would promote production of suitable foodstuffs in Britain without penalizing the consumers, tying the farmers up with red tape, promoting monopolies. They opposed conscription in peace time, wanted more than arms factories for the depressed areas.

But their most unusual decision was to hold that a mere redistribution of income was not enough to bring prosperity without the evils of socialism or plutocracy, and to find the only true remedy in the widespread ownership of property which they considered essential to human dignity and individual liberty. This voice is not often heard in England, since even the Liberals have stood for increasing socialization by national monopolies in certain fields of economic activity. The plea for the virtues of small-scale ownership is much more commonly heard in America than in England.

THE SCHOOLMASTERS were critical mainly of the government's physical training proposal which they feared would be completely wasted without a much more generous and thorough provision to prevent malnutrition, commonly known as starvation among children before and during school age. They demanded a reduction in the size of classes. There are now over 3,000 with more than 50 pupils to a teacher and over 46,000 with more than 40 pupils, while there is still considerable unemployment among teachers.

They deplored the elimination of the country teacher, due to the centralization of county schools, and they objected to women head mistresses over mixed schools. It takes men teachers to make manly men out of boys and women teachers to make womenly women out of girls. Or so say the teachers. The handicraft teachers viewed with alarm the growth of B. B. C. dictatorship over pronunciation of English, urged the development of handicraft training to make boys more machine minded. Which seems like preferring the frying pan to the fire?

The Conference of Corporation Tenants, who live in houses owned by municipalities, considered the merits of a rent strike to secure better housing. The registered naturopaths discussed the dangers of water softeners, the astrologers urged the usefulness of the planets in securing happy marriages. A good time was had by all, with the possible exception of those correctors of the press who didn't have a conference. They stayed at home and thought up new tortures for their victims.

Murder Story

By William Lyon Phelps

In Satirical Style.

Here is a new murder story, wholly original in style and plot, steadily exciting from start to finish, extremely well written—and, what is unlike any other mystery story I have ever read, is a most brilliant and charming satire on three famous detectives; so famous are they, indeed, that any confirmed reader of murder yarns will immediately recognize in this book these three marveling sleuths.

* * * *

This new novel is called "A Case for Three Detectives," is written by an Englishman, Leo Bruce, and is published by Frederick A. Stokes Co., New York. It is delicious—no other word for it.

The murder takes place in a charming old English country house, and there are some excellent descriptions of the beautiful neighboring English villages and the countryside. The story itself is so exciting that you cannot let it alone. But its exceptional feature is its deft and skillful satire on three famous detectives of current fiction. The wonderful thing about this satire, to my taste, is that although the caricatures are so perfect that the reader recognizes them instantly, they are not even one shade overdone. It takes an Englishman, perhaps, to understate so cleverly.

* * * *

In this book the three detectives are Lord Simon Plimsoll, Amer Picon and Mgr. Smith. And, of course, they stand respectively for Philo Vance, of S. S. Van Dine's novels, Hercule Poiret, of Agatha Christie's novels, and Father Brown, of G. K. Chesterton's novels. The Police Sergeant is also noteworthy—but I say no more.

Strategy In China

Shanghai Correspondent Analyzes Change In Japan's Attitude Toward Nanking; Russia And England Influences.

By Mark J. Ginsbourg.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Shanghai.

JAPAN'S REVERSAL of her policy in China is a move as bold as was her Manchurian adventure in 1931. But if hope and imperial ambition guided Tokyo in the eventful days of the Mukden incident today her strategy is motivated by a feeling closely akin to fear.

Japan wanted Manchuria as a rich source of raw materials needed by her industries; as a market for her manufactured goods; and as a base of operations in her program of continental expansion.

It was clearly realized in Tokyo that this ambitious program would eventually bring Japan into war with Russia. Plans were, therefore, drafted by the army "brain-trusters" to drive a wedge deep into Inner Mongolia, cleaving China from Russia and enabling Japanese troops to cut the vital Trans-Siberian Railway near Lake Baikal at a moment's notice.

In 1933 Jehol was added to Manchukuo and a demilitarized zone was created in the neighborhood of Peiping. In 1934, North China became the base of a strong Japanese garrison. In 1935, Chahar was cleared of all unfriendly Chinese troops, and last year, the province was brought under the absolute control of the Japanese army by the simple device of buying over all the Mongol princes and bandit chiefs.

Wedge First Entered Suiyuan Late Last Year.

LATE LAST YEAR, the sharp point of the wedge began to penetrate the borders of Suiyuan. The province is controlled by Gen. Yen Hsi-shan, the famous "model governor" of the neighboring Shansi. Gen. Yen needs Suiyuan because he derives an immense profit from selling Mongol lands to Chinese colonists. Moreover, it is through Suiyuan that Gen. Yen brings in his opium from the Moslem northwest.

Japanese control of Suiyuan would force Gen. Yen to divert this vast traffic in drugs to Shensi, where Nanking or the local warlords would tax it to their hearts' content.

Fired by these two potent reasons, Yen's troops in Suiyuan successfully resisted the repeated attacks of the well-equipped but ill-disciplined hordes of Wang Ying, a bandit chief, and Prince Teh, an ambitious, able and syphilitic Mongol leader.

Grasping the objectives of the Japanese strategy, Moscow in 1935 brought the Chinese Red armies from their strongholds in Kiangsi, in the Yangtsze valley, to the extreme northwest, where they could thwart the Japanese schemes. Last year, this force made an experimental raid into Shansi, encountered no resistance, and returned to its new bases in north Shensi.

If Moscow was not responsible for the Sian coup of December 13—and there is no reason for believing that it was—the mutiny was Heaven's gift to atheistic Soviet Russia. As a result of the coup, the Chinese Reds are no longer fought by the government armies; their ranks have been filled by thousands of men from the mutinous force; they have gained national sympathy, and, finally, they were given an opportunity to voice their appeals for resistance to Japan.

Sian Coup Reacted Unhappily On Japan.

THE WESTWARD progress of the wedge has thus been given a severe jolt. But what is even more important, the Nanking-Communist understanding and the growing anti-Japanese sentiment throughout the country had placed Japanese interests in North China in particular and in China in general in jeopardy.

Stricken by fear, Tokyo decided to give up its ambitious plans for the present in order to pacify the aroused Chinese millions.

Great Britain, like Russia, played a clever waiting game in China. London clearly realized that it faced the alternative of coming to terms with Tokyo on the division of China into spheres of influence, or helping China to fight Japan.

Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, chief economic adviser to the British government, after a study of the conditions on the spot, proposed to Tokyo to split China into spheres of influence. Drunk with its victories in North China, and mindful of Great Britain's preoccupation with Abyssinia, Tokyo scornfully rejected Sir Frederick's proffer.

This it came to regret. Each new act of Japanese aggression pushed Nanking closer to Great Britain and Russia. Last summer, when Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, China's "Il Duce," crushed the southwestern revolt, Great Britain finally came to terms with Nanking. Under these terms, the British now wield as strong an influence in South China as Japan ever did in the north.

For large Chinese orders for machines and railway equipment, London reciprocated with sound advice on financial matters, assistance in maintaining currency stability, and strong political support in warding off Japan's blows. That a Sino-British understanding will become tomorrow's biggest news is indicated by the impending visit to London by China's financial genii—Dr. H. H. Kung, Finance Minister, and Mr. T. V. Soong, who negotiated the American wheat and cotton loan.

In a nutshell, Japan's reversal of policy toward China was dictated by her fear of the growing influence of Moscow and London in China, and her realization that the continuation of an aggressive policy would only be of advantage to her two major rivals.

Despite Public Opinion Tokyo Has Large Advantages.

HANDICAPPED by the strong anti-Japanese feeling in China, Japan possesses advantages which no other nation has. Geographical proximity and low-cost production give Japan's goods an immense advantage over foreign products. Kindred culture and writing, superior knowledge of the Chinese market, efficient transportation system between the two countries are some of the other advantages enjoyed by Japan.

And, finally, there is the strong desire for peace with Japan entertained by the ruling classes and government cliques in China. The Nanking government is supported by three pillars: the bankers of Chekiang and Kiangsu, the landlords and the army, which is closely linked with the landed gentry.

All these groups, including the military, desire internal peace and unity. They abhor communism and the Popular Front, which seek to precipitate a foreign war and wrest control of the government from the groups now in power.

Among the government leaders themselves, there is a vocal faction, led by Mr. Wang Ching-wei, one of the "elder statesmen," which has advocated peace with Japan and a relentless war on communism for the past five years.

It was Mr. Wang who drafted last month's remarkable manifesto of the Kuomintang, China's ruling party. The document bore marks of strenuous efforts to spare Japan's susceptibilities by avoiding all unkind remarks regarding her actions in North China, Manchuria and Inner Mongolia.

It is on this faction and on the moneyed classes which form the backbone of the government that Japan banks her hopes of rapprochement with Nanking and checking the inroads of Soviet and British influence in China. So certain was Japan of the basic ideology of the groups now in power in Nanking, that she did not even protest against the Kuomintang-Communist understanding. The latter, Tokyo realized, was an empty sop to the radical groups demanding resistance to Japan.

Japan Is Now Trying To Reassure Chinese.

THERE ARE two ways of catching a rabbit. Japan tried it by frightening the animal. But the rabbit sought refuge on the British and Russian estates, where Japan could not get it. Today Tokyo is trying the other method, of throwing carrots to the rabbit and saying: "Come here, dear rabbit; remember, we have always been good friends."

Tokyo's carrots, as far as can be seen now, will be entirely to Nanking's taste. The first of them is the abolition of Japanese consular jurisdiction in China. Tokyo has already announced that it views "with sympathy" Nanking's desire to abolish extraterritoriality. It may be too optimistic to expect Japan to give up her special rights in China at once, but that she will relinquish them in a year or two is most probable.

Japanese-protected smuggling, which is making serious inroads into the government's customs revenues, will probably also go. But in making the last two concessions, Japan will undoubtedly demand radical slashes in the Chinese customs tariff on Nippon-made goods, such as cotton textiles, cheap rubber products, sugar and soap.

The last concession that Japan is likely to make to Nanking is the transfer of the silver, hoarded by Japanese banks here, to the Chinese government. These silver stocks are valued at less than United States $3,000,000, but the move would be interpreted as a friendly gesture.

It is generally believed here that these carrots have already been proffered to the Chinese by the influential Japanese economic mission, now visiting China. The Chinese reaction to these proposals is expected to guide the new Japanese Foreign Minister, Mr. N. Sato, in formulating his China policy.

It can be regarded as certain that, for the time being, Tokyo objectives will be confined to the following:

1. Lowering of the Chinese customs tariff on Japanese goods.
2. Inauguration of air service between Tokyo and Peiping.
3. Nanking's assent to Japanese plans for the economic development of North China.

The past demands for the recognition of Manchoukuo; for joint anti-Communist operations in China, and for the grant of economy to the northern provinces have been shelved, and, barring unexpected political developments, should not reappear for years to come.

Japan has thus opened a new chapter in her relations in China.

I might as well be honest about it. I don't like these city barber shops I suppose they have'ta hustle like that in order to pay for all the fancy equipment.

I suppose a city man gits jest as nervous when he goes in a barber shop down home and he happens to be in a hurry. I'll never forgit the time a travelin' salesman come dashin' into my uncle's barber shop and says Gimme a haircut real quick!"

My unce got up out of his chair and yawned and then he called his boy in and he says, "Pernell, go over to the Press-Argus and tell Hugh Park if he's through editin' the paper, I'd like'ta have my scissors."

ABC Inquiry To Be Opened Next Week

Rep. Palmisano to Look Into Administration of Liquor Act.

By James D. Secrest.

The projected triple inquiry of the House District Committee yesterday threatened to dwindle to a single investigation or at best a double-barreled inquiry.

Apparently because of confusion at Wednesday's meeting, two members went away with the understanding that their motions to investigate the public utility act and the motorists' financial responsibility law were adopted and that subcommittees would be appointed.

Chairman Mary T. Norton and the clerk of the committee, however, understood differently. Both insisted that neither motion was carried and that the minutes of the meeting carried no record of them.

The only inquiry apparently which was duly authorized was that proposed by Representative Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, into the administration of the liquor control act by the A. B. C. Board.

Palmisano Heads Inquiry.

Mrs. Norton yesterday named him chairman of a special sub-committee to conduct this investigatoin, and Palmisano said he would summon members of the board to explain why they have suspended or revoked licenses of retailers for failure to pay their debts to wholesalers promptly.

Representatives Sacks (Democrat), of Pennsylvania; Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, and Brewster (Republican), of Maine, also were named on the sub-committee. Another Democrat will be appointed probably today.

Dirksen, who insists that he made a motion to have a study made of the public utility act, said that if the committee's minutes do not show that his motion carried, he will renew it at the next meeting.

Asserting the belief the organic act of the Public Utilities Commission needs to be brought up to date, Dirksen explained that he has no criticism to make of the commission itself.

Seeks Broader Powers.

"I am interested in finding out whether or not the commission might be granted broader powers over public utility operations," he said.

"We want to determine whether it is hamstrung in its efforts to control public utilities in the District by an obsolete statute."

He said he had investigated complaints regarding the one-man car order of the commission and that he is convinced that the commission legally could not refuse to approve the change.

Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, who made the motion to investigate the motorists financial responsibility act with the view of broadening it, appeared willing to drop the matter temporarily after a talk with Mrs. Norton.

The District Committee chairman suggested that the subject might be pursued further in connection with the plan of the Kennedy sub-committee to examine proposals for municipal governmental reform.

Investigate Administration.

Palmisano said his inquiry, which propably will start next week, may delve into the general administration of the liquor act.

"I am not trying to protect dealers who don't pay their debts," he said. "I pay my debts and I believe everybody else should, too. But I don't think the A. B. C. Board should be a collection agency for the wholesalers.

"Maybe there's a good reason why a dealer can't pay his bills when they come due."

In regard to the investigation, Mrs. Agnes K. Mason, acting A. B. C. Board chairman, declared her agency was only enforcing the law. To prevent tie-ups between manufacturers and retailers, she said, the law provides that wholesalers grant only "a reasonable extension of credit" to retail liquor dealers.

She pointed out that last year, after hearing testimony from both groups, it had been agreed that 15 days constituted a reasonable extension of credit and that an extension of more than 30 days was unlawful.

As a result of this agreement, Mrs. Mason said, 15 retailers found to be delinquent had had their licenses suspended for one day, 15 others had been warned and 15 cases were still pending. She declared that the total of 45 delinquent retailers was only approximately 2 per cent of the total.

D. A. R. Chapter Plans Memorial Service

Tributes to two of its past members will be paid by Marcia Burns Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, in a memorial service at the graves of Miss Mary Stewart and her sister, Mrs. Caroline K. Nice, at 3 p. m. tomorrow in Rock Creek Cemetery.

The regent, Mrs. Minnie Ashbrook Tull, will preside at the services and State officers, members and friends have been invited to attend.

Dr. Sheldon Glueck, of Harvard University, and Mrs. John Jay O'Connor at last night's social workers' conference.

Harvard Law Teacher, in Talk Before Social Agencies' Conference, Scores Lack of Co-operation in U. S.

The American criminal justice system was described last night as a "sprawling, disintegrated, inefficient mass of attitudes, prejudices, agencies and personnel," by Prof. Sheldon Glueck, of Harvard Law School.

His address, entitled "A Criminologist Looks at Social Work," featured the opening session of a joint conference of the Washington Council of Social Agencies and the Maryland State Conference of Social Work. The meeting will continue at the Wardman Park Hotel through tomorrow.

Dr. Glueck cited the lack of a centralized criminal statistics service and a clearing house for criminal records, multiplicity and local jealousies of police administrations within a State, "stubborn" courts, insanitary jails and the decentralized status of probation and parole services.

"There is an absence of that intelligent collaboration of the agencies of justice that is indispensable to effective action," he said.

"The police head conceives of his job as an end in itself, the prosecutor is inclined to think that the sole aim of his activities is to obtain convictions, the judge fondly believes that by 'disposing' of his cases through hastily considered sentences he has done his complete duty.

"The penal administrator thinks that his job begins with the reception of the convict and ends with his discharge and the parole agent believes that his sole task is to see that the parolee does not violate the conditions of his freedom."

Illustrating the need of a systematic interrelation of all forms of social service, he told of the results of a survey of 750 probationers. More than 300 belonged to families which had been aided by social welfare agencies but in only 90 cases did the probation officers know of the "activity of even one of the social agencies involved in the lives of the men they were supposed to be investigating."

Social service, he said, should:

1. Avoid the danger of "too great impersonalness and too mechanical treatment of the human beings for whom you act."
2. Engage in long-time planning.
3. Realize the value of research.
4. Improve methods of selecting, training and supervising personnel.
5. "Evolve a consistent and satisfying philosophy."

Dr. George H. Preston, chairman of the conference committee, and the Rev. Russell J. Clinchy, president of the Council of Social Agencies, presided at last night's dinner meeting.

Round table discussion today will consider school and family case work, institutional care of children, juvenile delinquency and public health medical care.

T-Shop Slayer To Die May 14; Plea Is Denied

Justice Peyton Gordon in District Court yesterday fixed May 14 as the date on which Thomas Jordan, bus boy slayer of Mrs. Lizzie S. Jaynes, must pay his debt to society for the killing.

The date was fixed shortly after the White House had approved a Department of Justice recommendation that Jordan, who has had four reprieves from the electric chair, be denied further stays.

Jordan robbed the Gearden-T-Shoppe the night of April 3, 1931, with a male and female companion; in the course of the robbery Mrs. Jaynes was shot once through the abdomen and died several days later. Jordan and the woman were arrested afterward, but were released when no evidence of their guilt was found.

Two years afterward Jordan wrote to Leslie C. Garnett, United States attorney, asking if it would be safe to return here, with his prospective bride, because of his prior connection with the Jaynes case. His curiosity aroused by the letter, Col. Garnett referred it to the police department, and detectives obtained a confession.

None of the alleged accomplices have ever been brought to trial. Jordan, a professional waiter, is 36. He protested his innocence at his trial, but was convicted in short order.

Refusal of the White House to grant clemency was Jordan's last hope for leniency.

D. C. Firm Claims U. S. Erred in Income Levy

The Rock Creek Ginger Ale Co., of this city, yesterday asked the Board of Tax Appeals to redermine a $28,352 deficiency assessed on 1934 income and excess profits taxes.

The company contended the Bureau of Internal Revenue erred in disallowing deductions for officers' salaries and in holding the company "improperly" accumulated profits for the purpose of preventing the imposition of surtaxes on its stockholders.

Charity Runs Deficit Here In Hospitals

Crusade Points to D. C. Program's Urgent Need of Help.

This is the third in a series of articles describing the plight of Washington's nine united hospitals now carrying on a "crusade for health"—an emergency appeal for financial aid.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

Every 25 seconds some Washingtonian seeks the services of a private hospital and gets attention, whether he can pay for it or not.

At Children's Hospital, for example, a youngster with poverty-stricken parents and a fractured leg is accorded the same care as one whose expenses will be paid in full. Struggling under a deficit that has mounted steadily since the Community Chest has been forced to cut hospital appropriations, this institution has continued to care for every child sent to it by the Central Admitting Bureau for Hospitals—regardless of pay, or lack of it.

In both its out-patient and in-patient departments service has been dispensed to hundreds of Community Chest charges for whom the full expense incurred could not be settled. In a recent month $4,521 was billed to the Chest fund for cases served at Children's. As payment on this account the institution got $3,147. With eight other hospitals depending on support from the Chest, this sum was as much as could be paid to Children's in the month in question.

Deficit Passes $20,000.

This situation has been typical of the turn of affairs month on end, with the result that this institution's deficit has reached the level of between $20,000 and $25,000. While the hospital has some endowment, it does not have enough to cover such a loss much longer. If the care and treatment given to Washington's ill and needy children in the past is to continue, financial help for Children's Hospital must be forthcoming.

And what about the care of needy women in the future? A trip through the obstetrical departments of five of the nine hospitals now appealing for help will convince any onlooker that Washington mothers, despite their inability to pay for the service, are given superior care at childbirth. Columbia Hospital, the one institution among the nine united hospitals that restricts its field to care of women served 98 mothers and 60 babies—Community Chest charges—in its in-patient department last month. During the same period service in its out-patient division was dispensed to 1,273 persons on the same basis.

Garfield Suffers Also.

While the Community Chest bill for March has not yet been settled, it is probable that not more than 70 per cent of the cost for these patients will be paid by this agency. The remainder will have to be borne by a hospital that already has suffered a shortage of more than $10,000 on Chest payments since the beginning of 1937.

Garfield Hospital, an institution with 311 beds, is averaging an even larger deficit—more than $20,000—as a result of caring for such a large number of nonpaying and part-paying patients. Last month, 110 persons in this group were cared for 1,745 days in the in-patient department; while 2,184 received service in the dispensary. Not more than 70 per cent of this cost can be settled by the Chest. The hospital will shoulder the remainder of the expense, and no institution can afford to continue bearing such a burden indefinitely.

27 Are Hurt When Trolley Catches Fire

Passengers Stampede for Exits as Others Smash Windows.

Twenty-seven persons were injured, one severely, shortly before noon yesterday when the front end of a southbound Georgia avenue street car burst into flames, causing many passengers to stampede for the exit, and others to smash windows with their hands in a frantic effort to escape. The fire occurred at Georgia avenue and Lamont street northwest.

According to President E. D. Merrill, of the Capital Transit Co., the explosion and ensuing fire was caused by "grounding in the blow magnet inside the controller case." The purpose of this coil, he said, is to eliminate arcing at the controller fingers.

"Failure of insulation on these coils is very rare. We will, however, undertake to eliminate all possible causes of this kind of failure in the future," Merrill declared. Company officials said the car was an old-fashioned middle-door type.

Jesse M. Dungan, 28 the motorman, of 39 Sherman circle, stuck to his post at the control box, though flames licked all around him, and brought the car to a halt. He was treated at Garfield Hospital for severe burns on the neck and hands.

Others treated at Garfield Hospital for cuts from glass and minor bruises were Miss Alvera Kirschmeyer, 21, of 3538 Warder street; Mrs. Ercelle Quinn, Walter Reed Hospital; Theresa Hanson, 52, Silver Spring, Md.; Weiland J. Michael, 47, 802 Taylor street; Jesse A. Herbert, 45, 724 Farragut street northwest; Dorothy Ahlgren, 26, of 445 Park road; Loretta Stelfox, 39, of 508 Holstein avenue, Takoma Park, Md.; Mary Lee Wise, 21, colored, of 409 H street northwest, and Miss Ethel Addison, 27, colored, of 1929-A Eleventh street northwest. All were released after treatment.

Treated on Scene.

At Freedmen's Hospital the following were treated and released: Sally Walker, 39, of 603 L street northeast; Virginia Potteer, 24, of 601 Park road northwest, and Jesse M. Moss, 51, of 423 Q street, all colored.

Treated at the scene of the accident at an emergency first aid station set up in a woman's clothing shop at 3218 Georgia avenue were Miss Louise Weber, 5215 Thirteenth street northwest, Mrs. Carrie E. Trivett, 63; Carrie E. Trivett, 28; Mrs. Dent Brady, all of 808 Aspen street northwest, and Bradley Fisher, 25, of 2505 Mills avenue northeast.

An eye-witness account of the mad scramble was given by Miss Kirschmeyer, who was the first to smash a window, climb out and hang by the iron guard rail while the car was still in motion.

"It was everybody for himself or herself and I mean that literally," she said. "Men lost what chivalry they had and fought in the mad scramble for the door."

The 21-year-old girl dropped to the ground before the car came to a stop, then climbed back to recover her knitting basket and left shoe.

A similar account was given by Weiland J. Michael, who suffered a bruised thumb.

Praises Car Operators.

"The car was packed—there must have been 60—when the explosion took place. Glass was shattered by the concussion and then people started breaking windows," he said.

Michael praised the motorman for his courage, and Conductor S. H. Jefferson, who, he said, had his hands full at the exit. If Jefferson had opened the door while the car was still in motion, injuries might have ben much more serious, he said. When the car finally came to a stop, the conductpr was unable to open the door for five minutes because of the crush, according to Michael.

Sub-committee Favors Control Of D. C. Realty

A bill to set up a real estate commission to supervise realty operations in Washington will be reported favorably, with a few minor amendments, to the House District Committee, Representative Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, chairman of a sub-committee, said yesterday at the conclusion of hearings.

The sub-committee heard a recital of complaints investigated by the Better Business Bureau before concluding the inquiry.

Joseph W. Marshall, director, charged that unscrupulous real estate dealers have been "hoodwinking" Washingtonians. He cited the free-lot lures and sales of cemetery lots for speculation as examples of realty rackets which are thriving.

Marshall said the real estate field has been invaded recently by men who have run afoul the law in the sale and promotion of securities. He cited the case of a group indicted in Washington for fraud that is now allegedly seeking a license to start a development in nearby Virginia.

Charles J. Rush, executive secretary of the Washington Real Estate Board, also assailed disreputable real estate dealers. He said "some damnable misrepresentations" had been brought to his attention.

Police Seek Missing Eastern High Student

Police yesterday were asked to search for Frank Etzler, 15, Eastern High School student, of 1011 B street northeast, who has been missing since Wednesday. The boy left a note for his mother, Mrs. Anna M. Etzler, saying he was going away to "make something of himself."

Mrs. Etzler told police that her son looks older than his 15 years. He is 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighs 150 pounds, has brown haid, blue eyes and a round face. He was wearing a brown leather jacket, brown trousers and a brown felt hat.

Civic Leader Seeks Inquiry Of Car Blaze

Transit Firm Operating Unsafe Equipment, Clayton Charges.

Charges that the Capital Transit Co. is operating unsafe street cars were made at the Public Utilities Commission hearing yesterday by William McK. Clayton, chairman of the Federation of Citizens' Associations public utilities committee.

Just as the Public Utilities Commission was adjourning for the day its evaluation hearing on the Capital Transit Co., Clayton brought up the street-car accident which injured 27 persons yesterday and demanded "a rigid and thorough" inquiry to learn whether the car involved was obsolete.

He pointed out that the Federation of Citizens' Associations several months ago recommended the purchase of between 150 and 200 new cars.

Merrill Denies Charge.

Clayton's charges were denied vigorously by E. D. Merrill, president of the transit company.

After asking for an investigation, Clayton said:

"If it's shown that an obsolete type of car was involved in the accident, we want all others of that type ordered out of service immediately."

Merrill then leaped to his feet and interjected:

"We've already ordered 45 new cars this year. We've borrowed money to do that. This is all the equipment that the company is financially justified in ordering at present. We want to buy these cars as fast as we can."

Cars "Must Be Safe."

When Clayton asked whether that type car would be banned if defects were found he was told by P. U. C. Vice Chairman Richmond B. Keech that any car operated "must be safe."

The Citizens' spokesman, who for years has concerned himself with the transportation system, then said he was informed that motormen were required to take out street-cars which they did not believe were capable of getting back to the barns under their own power.

Earlier in the day the commission placed in evidence a $576,134 lower appraisal on land owned by the Capital Transit Co. after testimony given by Harry D. Scantlin a member of the board of assessors.

Scantlin's estimate of the total value of company land in the District was $2,121,931. The company's own valuation was $2,708,065.

Napoleon Gives Casting Office Heebie-Jeebies

Metro Has Troublous Time Trying to Decide Who Is Best Little Corporal.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, April 15.—The well-worn question of "Who's Napoleon?" is troubling Metro casters, who shortly will have two pretenders to the title posing on the same lot.

The No. 1 Napoleon presents no problem. He's Charles Boyer, an 1814 vintage Napoleon, who is already at work, stooging for Greta Garbo's grand passion in "Madame Walewska."

Boyer probably doesn't look much like Napoleon, but that needn't worry the customers, since he's supposed to represent a brand of super-charged sex appeal the original Emperor didn't have. There were probably times when Napoleon would have preferred to look like Boyer.

No. 2 Napoleon will appear in the musical, "Firefly" (1808 A. D.), playing below Jeanette MacDonald and Allan Jones.

It's these second-rate Napoleons that are tough to cast. There is no dearth of candidates when the job is accompanied by electric lights and special dialogue treatment.

A C-3 Napoleon.

Answer in this case is probably Rollo Lloyd, who did Napoleon in "Anthony Adverse." Lloyd is a sort of C-3 Napoleon used when the Emperor gets twelfth or thirteenth spot in the billing.

The best possible choice, if the studio could borrow him, would be Claude Rains, whose "Napoleon" in "Hearts Divided" is still the celluloid top as far as this column is concerned.

First movie Napoleon was William Humphrey, who played the part back in the old Vitagraph days, and the least illustrious an extra, who played Napoleon's shadow in "Becky Sharp."

Charlie Chaplin is the most prominent yearner to play Napoleon in the star class, and he may yet surprise the natives by doing the thing on his own hook.

Edward G. Robinson and Peter Lorre have been trying to talk themselves into the cocked hat and boots for years, with no luck.

The most forlorn candidate is Hugh Herbert, who thinks he'd be a wow in the role in spite of everything.

White hair is the most expensive brand for film purposes, reports Mel Berns, RKO makeup man, silver threads costing $25 an ounce compared with $15 for gold or red. Brunette locks are the cheapest, going at $5 and $10.

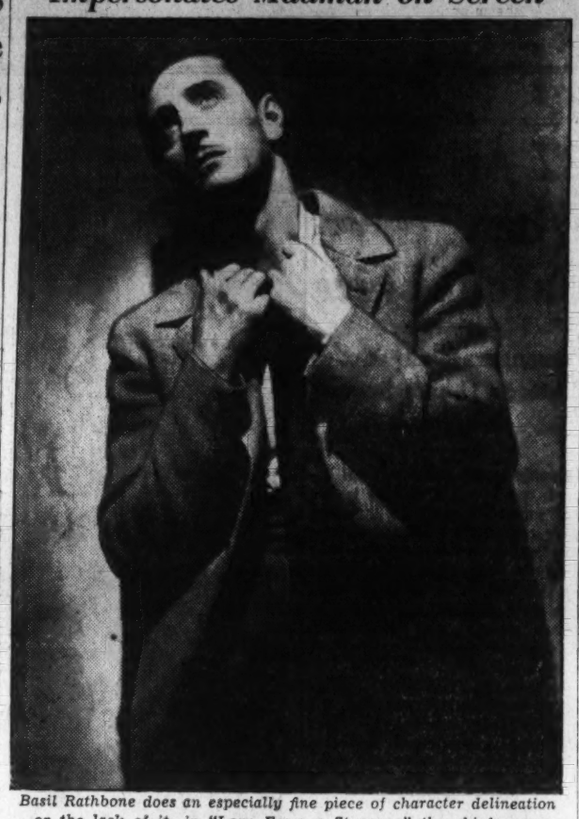
Impersonates Madman on Screen



Basil Rathbone does an especially fine piece of character delineation—or the lack of it—in "Love From a Stranger," the chief screen feature opening at Loew's Capitol Theater today. The foremost feminine role is played by Ann Harding, as the hapless wife of this murderous maniac. A strong supporting cast of British actors appear in the auxiliary roles in this Trafalgar Productions release, distributed in America by United Artists.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, April 15.—Some day a writer with a nose for poignant prose will pen a book about this town's unsung heroes, the stunt men. There's enough stark drama among their ilk to fill a library.

GINGER ROGERS.

Today I mostly listened during a chat with Harvey Perry, about whom I have written at other times. He is among the last of the once common stunt men. Others have either quit or been washed out performing their death defies.

Perry has many harrowing tales to tell. Of the time, for example, when he performed a spectacular crash four times, then overheard a cold-blooded director tell his assistant, "Let's do it once moor—something may happen to him!" It took three husky set-workers to keep Perry from beating hell out of that director.

Harvey also told me a story about two stunt men who were hired to navigate a canoe through a dangerous rapids, right to the brink of a falls. The men, playing safe as possible, stretched a heavy wire across the stream just above the falls. Before the scene, one of the stunters had a hunch to examine the wire, and despite the director's vehement insistence that everything was all right, he took a look. The wire had been removed and a camera was trained on the falls to catch the canoe and men going over. "The stunters fixed that director," Perry said. "They shoved him into their canoe and took him along. Of course they pulled in to shore before they reached the rapids, because they only wanted to scare him. But before they pulled to shore that director was crying like a baby and he was sick from shock for two days afterward.

Before I leave Harvey Perry, here is an amusing story he relates at his own expense. He was once hired to dive from a high bridge. It was quite a jump, and the director took precautions to have cameras set at every possible angle, so Perry need not repeat the stunt. Harvey made a perfect dive the first time, and he was pretty well pleased with himself as he swam for shore. Arriving there, he found everybody laughing and pointing. He turned to look at the towering span and saw 12 or 14 kids in trunks making the same dive. They had been jumping off the bridge since the day the steel framework was set.

In a scene for the newest Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers opus, they were trying to persuade a puppy to follow flaming-haired Ginger. They first directed the dog from the sidelines, but he became confused. Next they tried an invisible wire, but it jerked the pup along in a series of too obvious bounces. Ginger at last entered into conference with her wardrobe assignee and the property man. When she returned to the scene the puppy amazingly chased after her. Miss Rogers had sewed a hot-dog under the hem of her long, trailing dress and the pup was pursuing the smell.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Thinking Things Through.

West was a pretty good player as most players go. He generally made sound bids and played the dummy pretty well; but, like many players of his kind, he was weak on defense.

A great deal of any player's weakness on defense consists in a failure to think a problem through to the end. That was West's mistake in the hand below.

South, dealer.

♠ A K 9 5
♡ K 10 8

◇ K Q J 5 2
♣ A 8 6

North-South vulnerable; East-West not vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 N T	Pass	3 ◇	Pass
3 N T	Pass	Pass	Pass

West made the correct opening lead—the ten of clubs. Declarer realized from the lead that East had at least one of the missing high clubs; West would not have led the ten had he held the K Q 10. There was, therefore, no point to putting up dummy's Jack, and declarer properly played dummy's deuce. East played low, and declarer also ducked, permitting West's ten to hold the first trick.

Satisfied that he had chosen the correct suit to open, West contented himself with merely continuing the suit. It did not occur to him that it was a matter of vital importance to lead the correct card in the suit. On his lead of a low club, East's Queen covered dummy's Jack, and declarer ducked once more. But now the suit was blocked—no matter what the defenders did, they could not knock out the Ace of clubs before the Ace of diamonds had been removed. And once that card had been removed declarer could not run the rest of the tricks.

Had West not played so mechanically he would have seen that the real problem was not whether or not to continue clubs, but which club to lead at the second trick. Obviously, declarer did not have both the Ace and the Queen, for then the ten would not have held the first trick. Just as obviously, declarer did not hold the Queen and East the Ace, for then, even if East had ducked, declarer would have been forced to win the first trick.

The only remaining conclusion was that his partner held the Queen and declarer the Ace. If his partner's Queen were blank at this point, only by leading the King of clubs could West make sure that the suit would not be blocked. No harm would be done if East were left with the Queen and one club and declarer with the blank Ace. In that case the lead of the King of clubs would practically shriek to East the necessity of dropping his Queen to unblock the suit.

By leading the King of clubs West could have set declarer two tricks, instead of letting him make his contract of three notrump with an overtrick.

LaGuardia Urges U. S. Housing Aid

By the Associated Press.

Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York told a Senate group yesterday "proper, decent, low-rent housing is not possible without very generous Government subsidies."

He testified at a labor committee hearing on the Wagner bill for a billion-dollar Federal housing program.

LaGuardia asserted efforts of the Public Health Service to check disease were "destroyed" when "at the same time we close our eyes to disease-breeding buildings."

Refusal of Cut For Milk Price Is Under Fire

Montgomery, Consumers' Counsel for AAA, Sees No Excuse.

Criticism of the decision of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers' Association not to grant a seasonal reduction in Washington's 14-cent milk price on May 1 was voiced yesterday by Donald E. Montgomery, consumers' counsel of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

The 1-cent boost agreed to by the AAA last fall was purely an emergency measure because of poor pasturage and the expense of feed, Montgomery asserted. Conditions which necessitated the increase no longer exist, he added.

Director B. B. Herrick, of the association, announced yesterday that the 14-cent price established November 1 for a six months' period will be continued after expiration date of the agreement, May 1.

Montgomery said Derrick, in asking for the higher price last November, contended that "the Washington producer must depend heavily on purchased feed-stuffs until at least in the spring, when pastures may bring some relief."

He added he could not understand how, at this time of the year, the producers can state that increased production during the next few months would not justify a lower price.

Attention to the fact that consumption of fluid milk in the District fell off 12 per cent following the price increase last fall was called yesterday by the consumers' council.

Montgomery stressed the point that local prices are higher than in comparable cities on the eastern seaboard.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, April 15.

SAM HARRIS is now in Phoenix, Ariz., recuperating. He has called off production plans until his health is regained. One of the shows thus postponed is a Cole Porter musical . . . Columbia is delighted at Barbara Week's film work . . . Eddie Dowling, of the Shubert office, prefers not to be confused with Eddie Dowling, the producer, and so will be known henceforth by his full name—Edward Duryea Dowling . . . Sherman Billingsley was offered the proposition to take over the Club Ball, as opposition to his rival, El Morocco, across the street. Billingsley, however, spurned the deal.

• • • •

WHEN DON MARQUIS last visited the Players Club, he indulged himself in a game of pool. Just as he was about to essay a difficult shot, Henry Hull passed by and shoved his cue . . . Two minutes later, when Marquis was about to try the same shot, Hull and another man walked by—and again shoved Marquis's cue . . . Marquis pointed to both men and announced: "Both members of the same horse!"

• • • •

HELP WANTED: Leo Gorcey is the tough youngster who portrays the role of "Spit" in "Dead End" . . . Gorcey, although his performance has been lauded by the critics, is a very much disappointed youth . . . "What'm I doing here? Every night, the same old thing," he lamented last night . . . "What's your ambition?" the lad was asked . . . "Well," he confessed, "I want something different happening every night. D'you know what I want to be? I want to be a plumber!"

• • • •

OBITUARY: In the early part of February a young, handsome actor named John Lenthier applied for a role in the road company of "Brother Rat." Garson Kanin, assistant to Producer George Abbott, favored Lenthier's employment—but awaited word from Abbott, who was vacationing in Palm Beach . . . Lenthier seemed impatient. "I'd like to know if the job is mine," he stated. "You see—I've got something to do out of town and I don't want to lose out on it" . . . I'd like to hire you," Kunn told him, "but I don't want to keep you from that out-of-town job" . . . Kanin heard no more about the young, handsome actor—until yesterday . . . when he received notice of Memorial Services to be held for John Lenthier, who was killed in action while fighting for the Spanish loyalists . . .

ETHEL WATERS takes to the floor of the Cotton Club to wail advice about keeping your husband always in sight. Behind her, blowing a cornet accompaniment, is Bill Mallory, whom Ethel is introducing as her husband . . . Backstage, Miss Waters and Duke Ellington present birthday presents to the 13-year-old Harold Nicholas. The gifts are a shaving outfit and a box of cigars . . . "I got my father travelin' wid me now," Jimmy Durante enthuses at the Yumuri. "He's 83, and used to be a barber. If he likes a pal o' mine, he giz de guy a haircut free. He carries his tools wid 'im."

"I JUST GOT BACK from Hot Springs," Sam Boston, the betting commissioner, informs at Lindy's. "I saw 'Lloyd's of London' there. So that's how those guys work, eh? Well, I'm a hundred and eighty years ahead of 'em!" . . . Paul Stewart enters Longchamps with Eve March. Stewart, who has been turned down for screen jobs because of his bushy eyebrows, listens to Eve relate: "So, if I told that to my doctor his eyebrows would drop off."

• • • •

CONNIE DRAKE, former strip dancer at the Irving Place Burlesque, sulks in a corner before doing her routine at the Village Brewery. "Imagine, me, a striper," she complains in earshot of Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, "doing a number fully clothed—and wearing an overcoat."

• • • •

HARRY RITZ, exiting from the French Casino, reports of his Miami trip. "Two Ritz Brothers pictures were being played in Miami. An old man near me told his wife he had seen both pictures. He said: 'And now that they've fired that fourth brother, these three Marx Brothers are better than ever.'"

• • • •

"HERE'S A TIP on the Critics Circle," an agent whispers at Dave's. "When they thought they couldn't muster enough deciding votes, they were ready to disband the Circle. And when the prize is presented to Maxwell Anderson the dissenters won't be allowed to broadcast as they did last year." . . . Fred Finklehoffe, co-author of "Brother Rat," examines the published copy of the play. "We ransacked it for errors, counting even all the dots, and then okayed it. Now I see one mistake on the cover where it's 'Fred R.' instead of Fred E.'!"

The Belasco Theater Will Reopen as Picture House On Sunday, with "Ecstacy" Chief Screen Feature

Jack Thoman Returns as House Manager, Under General Direction of Sam Cummings, Well Known to Local Theater Interests; Ruth Draper to Play Week at National, Instead of One Day; Mail Orders Open for Jane Cowl in 'First Lady;' Managers Shifted by Warner Brothers; Notes of Amusement World.

THE Belasco Theater will reopen on next Sunday, April 18, with a new policy of motion picture presentation, under the general direction of Sam Cummings and the house managership of Jack Thoman, who returns to the post on Lafayette Square which he occupied under the Matty Radin regime, immediately preceding the Jules Leventhal occupancy as a producer of legitimate drama, so-called.

BELL.

The reopening attraction will be that provocative film, "Ecstacy," which holds the Washington long-run record. Following this return engagement, there will be a long succession of other screen offering presented under the Cummings aegis.

Sam Cummings will be recalled by season playgoers of the National Capital as the independent impressario who, at one time or another, has operated the Little Theater, the Gayety, the Academy and the Belasco in Washington. He is a daring soul. Most of his personal film properties arouse the animated discussion of screen gazers as innovations that always command interest, if not so unfailingly respect.

"Ecstacy," for example, is a screen play that won high honors in Czechoslovakia, where it was produced, but met with varying appraisals in this country. The first prints were confiscated by the customs officials and burned on the dock—or some other convenient place. Not to be deterred, Mr. Cummings, hied himself to Europe, secured additional prints and finally succeeded in getting the picture into the United States. It had its premiere in the Belasco Theater, to which it will return on Sunday.

There is a deal of subtle suggestiveness in this subject, but I never have been able to trace quite the official mental processes that decided it should not be shown on American screens. The story is a melodramatic sort of thing and there is a nude young woman—and a very beautiful one, alleged to have been the wife of a prominent munitions manufacturer on the other side—who cavorts more or less promiscuously through one brief sequence in which she is in pursuit of her riding horse, but insofar as a threat to the morals of the community is concerned, I never have been able to see why this film should have been banned in the first place.

However, the enterprising Mr. Cummings has a large number of other releases figuratively up his sleeve. He has taken the Belasco, one is led to believe, until late in September and, in course of time, will revert to the policy pursued by Matty Radin in presenting films of foreign origin on the Belasco screen. He is said to have a ton or two of these exclusive releases under contract.

In the meantime, he will present a succession of quasi-sensational celluloids such as marked his tenure of the theaters already mentioned in these dispatches. There may be some eyebrow raising before Sam gets through, but at least he will keep interest alive in his gelatin product and perhaps add a little to the local reputation as a keen showman he already has acquired.

Jack Thoman's return to the Capital will be an item in favor of the conduct of the Belasco under its new, but well-known management.

As for Sam Cummings, I knew him when!

The reserved seat sale for the third week of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of the Pearl S. Buck novel of "The Good Earth" opened at the National Theater yesterday. Not to have seen this production is tantamount to missing deliberately one of the most impressive camera productions of modern times. The costellar roles of Wang Lung and O-Lan are played by Paul Muni and Luise Rainer, winners of the Academy awards for the best screen acting of 1936—as you must have heard by this time.

• • • •

That charming and slightly Oriental distaff stentor of the better things of the living theater makes known that Ruth Draper, instead of playing only a Sabbath matinee and night performance at the National Theater on May 3, has articled herself for the full week on E street and will present her character skeiches for a week's, rather than a day's, run.

This completely frustrates the National's likelihood of having had an open week for the first time this season. There was nothing in sight for the May 3 week, until Miss Draper perceived the advantage of such a booking as Cornelia Otis Skinner has been accustomed to play locally these past few years.

This column even had had the temerity to suggest to the Katharine Cornell-Guthrie McClintic organization that Miss Cornell come to the National the week of May 4, to present George Bernard Shaw's "Candida," but in the light of subsequnet developments one suspects that this suggestion will result in "no dice," as we say in the back room.

Owing to the full week's engagement, it is worthy of note that Ruth Draper will not open her Washington engagement until Monday night, May 4, the conventional first night for all National attractions. The piece de resistance of her bill will be the familiar "Three Women and Mr. Clifford," in which she assumes the characters of Mrs. Mallory, Mrs. Clifford and Miss Nichols, secretary, in the una-drama.

• • • •

Mail orders for the return engagement of Jane Cowl in "First Lady," at the National Theater the week of April 26, now are being received at the box office. When the transcontinental tour of Miss Cowl in this gay comedy first was planned it was thought to end the season in time for her to attend the coronation in England. So many demands for extra performances bobbed up, however, that bookings took precedence over personal inclinations and the tour was extended to the middle of May. Washington is one of the beneficiaries of this belated arrangement.

• • • •

Alan Bachrach will assume the managership of the Warner Brothers' new Calvert Theater when that playhouse, located at 2324 Wisconsin avenue, is opened to the public on May 6. Bachrach is now manager of Warner's Apollo Theater, northeast. As his assistant manager at the Calvert he will have James Thompson, now student manager at the Colony.

Following his policy of promotions from the ranks, Zone Manager John J. Payette, of Warners, has announced a considerable list of other changes in personnel. Bachrach's post at the Apollo will be filled by Arthur Kilburg, transferred from the York. Theodore Lohmeyer, assistant manager at the Tivoli, will take over the managerial duties at the York. LeRoy Sherman has been named assistant manager at the Tivoli.

Student managers who move up by this shift include William Ballinger, from the Savoy to the York; Bennett Rock, from the York to the Savoy; Joseph Norton, from the Avalon to the Colony; Lloyd Hadaway, from the Apollo to the Avenue Grand; James Connor from the Avenue Grand to the Apollo, and Charles Burger, from the Home to the Avalon.

All you have to do now, if you are an habituated neighborhood theater attendant, is try to find your favorite house manager!

Featured in Musical at Keith's

When that long-awaited Universal production of "Top of the Town" reaches the screen at the RKO-Keith Theater today, one of the principal roles will be played by Doris Nolan, whose smiling likeness appears above. Miss Nolan, in this sprightly subject, will be associated with such able players as Hugh Herbert, George Murphy, Gregory Ratoff, Gertrude Niesen, Ella Logan, Henry Armetta, Mischa Auer, Claude Gillingwater, Richard Carle and a score more of the first flight.

Marla Shelton Explains Her Jaw-Breakers

By Henry Sutherland.

Hollywood, April 15.—To found a "reconstructive cosmocology institute" is the jaw-breaking ambition of pert, brunette Marla Shelton, and a former Secretary of War will help her do it.

All those words mean a sort of sex-appeal factory where any woman—no matter how unpromising—can learn to be "beautiful, personable and charming."

The former Secretary is Patrick Hurley, who rode herd on the War Department for President Hoover. He's Marla's godfather, and promised to underwrite the streamlining mill during a recent visit here, she said.

"But I won't call on him immediately, because I don't plan to start my institute until I am better known in pictures. One needs a great deal of publicity to back a venture of that kind."

Shelton is 21, three-eighths Cherokee Indian, and hails from Claremore, Okla., Will Rogers' home town. She's under contract to Walter Wanger, who thinks she has screen promise.

"Ever since I was 10 years old I have wanted to create a place where women could spend from two weeks to six months developing personality and acquiring new interests," she explained.

Puerto Rican Parade Planned Despite Ban

San Juna, Puerto Rico, April 15 (AP).—Puerto Rican nationalists announced tonight they would demonstrate tomorrow in tribute to a dead independence leader, despite a government ban.

The San Juan executive council announced City Manager De Castro had refused to sanction the planned parade and demonstration because of public excitement since a bloody riot in Ponce March 28, when 18 were fatally shot as nationalists and police clashed.

They met. They kissed. They married. But that's only the beginning of a romance that brought ecstasy, disillusionment and horror to a girl because she asked no questions of love!

Don't miss its startling climax...and please don't tell it to your friends. Let them too have the unparalleled thrill of seeing it!

Skaters to Use Dancing Floor At Shoreham

Alpine Background to Be Setting for Ice Carnival at Night Club.

By Chanticleer.

Things aren't going to be what they seem next week in the Shoreham's big ballroom. It will be daytime at night. And the dance floor will be equally used by skaters and dancers. And the time of our cherry blossoms will be time for an ice display with an Alpine background.

The occasion is the Shoreham's ice carnival, with skating stars of the first rank on hand, headed by Evelyn Chandler. It begins next Monday. Hollywood devised the little trick whereby the ballroom floor is a swell ice rink one moment and ideal for fox trotting the next.

For the nonce, we have the Three Yates Sisters in a varied dance program—Jerry, Lynn and Carol. And Tarrant and Dacita in original dances, some harking back to their native Russia and Spain. Don Hooton is a laughmaker borrowed from Vincent Lopez.

Al Sakol has a protege—Marion Swanson, now singing with the band at La Paree. Marion was added to the ork's singing staff after a series of auditions. Hightlight of the floor show is Bob Flinch's Personettes, another name for marionettes. Then there's Francis Jay, who gets his daily dozen juggling chairs on bottles. And the Three Markwalls in adagio and acrobatic dance numbers.

The Bradley Sisters are due (and no doubt on hand) at Cocoanut Grove—and a new emmcee, Frank McIntyre, is scheduled to arrive Saturday. Then there's Libby Frazier, of Bummingham, 'way down in the South, suh, who is clicking very well indeed with the Grove's clientele.

Seems to be an epidemic of birthdays suddenly in the ranks of the after-dark entertainers. Latest are Elise, the little girl who sings French and Spanish ditties at you table at the Madrillon, and Mischa Markoff, impresario at the Russian Troika. Elise admits being 22.

At Mischa's party, one femme guest was particularly impressed with the old world gallantry. All the gentlemen kissed her hand as you were presented. Just to put a neat turn to an old practice, the lady reversed the procedure when she left—and kissed all the gentlemen's hands.

Armand and Diana are on view these evenings at the Raleigh's Pall Mall Room. Bill Owens is the heart throb for the femmes . . . Dr. Marx, another exponent of "the hand quicker than the eye," is on deck at the Mayfair, beginning next Monday, for one week only. He comes from Leon and Eddy's in New York . . . Phil Lorria and his orchestra have opened at Boulevard Farms, featuring neither swing nor sweet music. The boys play 'em both. And never miss a request. Incidentally, the Farms is a grand place for dinner these spring evenings.

• • • •

Headlining the bill at the Lotus this week are Beryle and Martinez in modernistic waltz and Portuguese folk dances; George Kiddon, eccentric acrobatic and novelty tap artist; Swan and Lucille, in a revival of an old American jazz dance and something new in a modern jazz adagio. Bill Strickland and his orchestra for your dancing.

Maestro Arthur Warren, backed by no less than LeRoy Thayer, insists that the rhumba and tango are going to be the rage in time here. Already that way in New York, they report after a visit to some of the leading spots there. Warren will introduce two of his own new South American tunes soon.

• • • •

Rene and Raquel are taking bows at the Carlton's El Patio with a Mexican rhumba depicting the courtship of a Mexican washergirl and a shoeshine boy. Sande Williams and his orchestra for your dancing after 10.

Just a reminder that the Hi Hat Room at the Ambassador may be a cocktail room only—but just across the way is the dining room wherein a most delicious meal may be obtained. Music of the Hawaiians filters into the big room, of course. And the Hawaiians even will come to your dining table, if you wish.

2 Destroyer Keels Laid.

Boston, April 15 (AP).—Rear Admiral Walter R. Gherardi, commandant, today drove the first rivets into the keel plates of two new Navy destroyers to be built at the Boston Navy Yard at a total cost of $8,000,000.

Featured in Shoreham Carnival

Mrs. Hofstetter's Rites Tomorrow

Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery. The Rev. Harry Lee Doll, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, Alexandria, Va., will officiate.

Mrs. Hofstetter was a graduate of Washington State Normal School and had taught school in Idaho before her marriage in 1918 in San Francisco. She was born in Farmer, Ohio.

She is survived by a 2-year-old son, John Phillips Foote; her mother, Mrs Flora Norway, who has been living with Maj. and Mrs. Hofstetter, her husband; a brother, Charles Norway, Seattle, and a sister, Mrs. Leslie Tuthill, Oreville, Wash.

Six Prisoners Escape Jail in Pennsylvania

Uniontown, Pa., April 15 (U.P.).—Six prisoners tonight escaped from the Fayette County Jail after overpowering two jail attendants.

On the Air Today

Short wave fans report little difficulty these days in keeping up with the Spanish situation through at least two short-wave stations in Madrid. Both are under government supervision. A third station is being heard although not so clearly. It is believed to be operated by the insurgents.

EAQ, the old faithful among short wave stations on the continent before the Spanish trouble began, is still operating but the signal is not always satisfactory. It is operating now on 9,865 kilocycles between 5:15 and 9 p. m. More satisfactory is a new comer, EAQ2, on 9,840 kilocycles, between the hours of 7:30 and 9 p. m.

The third station is in the general vicinity of 14,000 kilocycles but apparently operates on no definite schedule. Listeners have reported it between the hours of noon and 8 p. m.

Sometimes you just can't rely on anything your best "ear-to-the-ground" operatives report. Now there was the report earlier this week that "Show Boat" would soon fold up and go once and for all to the radio show warehouse. Lanny Ross was reported as preparing for a new program next fall and a full hour program of the usual variety type would take over the period now held by "Show Boat."

Now comes word that not only will the original "Show Boat" be continued next fall—but the original "Capt. Henry" (Charley Winninger) is to preside once again at the helm. True, Lanny Ross will be featured in another show. But otherwise the "Show Boat" will be show-boatier than ever.

Winninger left the "Show Boat" in November, 1934, to make pictures. Among them, Edna Ferber's "Show Boat." He was followed by a new "Captain" and ultimately the elevating of Ross to the starring characterization. For months rumors have persisted that the river boat illusion and setting would be abandoned.

Ludendorff Points To Danger of War

Munich, Germany, April 15 (AP).—Germany's famed "Stormer of Liege" and war-time chief of staff, Gen. Erich von Ludendorff, told the Reich military leaders today to make sure a powerful army is backed by a "strong and united people."

Reviving World War memories as he received congratulations on the fifty-fifth anniversary of his enlistment in the Germany army, Von Ludendorff declared:

"The present situation in many respects resembles pre-World War days.

"Had my efforts to enforce general conscription succeeded, had the government foreign office at the time realized what was coming, had the people resisted undermining by dark forces, then so many nations' armies would not have risen against us."

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

How to Keep Happy Balance of Power in Protracted Courtship, Is Girl's Problem.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Will you kindly tell me how a couple, or rather the girl, can help keep things at a happy medium when they have gone together for some time? You see, we are not in a position to get married immediately and when two persons see a great deal of each other they seem to take each other more or less for granted. I have seen it happen a number of times among my friends and wish to avoid it in my case if possible. (I mean I have seen girls treated shamefully, or have seen the couple fight.)

* * * *

I know there should be mutual give-and-take, and that each should be generous, but there is also such a thing as being generous to a fault. What I believe I mean more than anything else is—how to stick up for one's rights without being a nagger?

* * * *

There is another question I wish to ask you. It is generally understood that we are to be married but we have never made any definite plans and my aunt believes I should have a complete understanding. Now, how does one approach such a subject in the proper manner? I have thought it over and over but haven't gotten up nerve enough to do anything about it. Some things are hard to do, no matter how well you know the person or how much you think of him.

* * * *

I would appreciate your answer as soon as possible as I am in Washington for only a few days and naturally will not see your paper after I return home. I came down to see the cherry blossoms and to visit friends here. I certainly hope they don't remove any of the trees. I have traveled a little and those cherry trees in bloom are as beautiful as anything I ever wish to see.

I just want to tell you, Miss Haworth, that I noticed your column the first day I arrived here. We don't have anyone in my town, like you, to whom we can go for advice. I think it is a wonderful thing. B. D.

A Difficult Matter.

DEAR B. D.: It is almost impossible to maintain a happy balance of power, so to speak, in a long drawn out courtship. That is why protracted engagements are traditionally frowned upon. However, a really intelligent woman endowed with tact, intuition and a certain quiet pride, may contrive to keep the reins of such a situation in her own hands. And that is what she must do, if romance is to be kept alive.

* * * *

In a long drawn out courtship or engagement there usually comes a time—unless the lady subtly and instinctively averts such a possibility from the very beginning—when the gentleman in the case no longer seems to place so high a premium on his lady's society. Whereas in the beginning he seemed apprehensive that she might not accept his invitations, and profoundly appreciative when she did, later on he appears to take it for granted that her company is his for the asking.

* * * *

His attentions become more perfunctory. He sees her on certainly tacitly accepted, regularly spaced days or evenings, often not bothering to call her more than a few hours in advance of the time of meeting. If such treatment is tolerated by the lady, a third stage is eventually ushered in. In this stage, he is found calling to say he can't see her on such-and-such an evening; or he calls at the last minute to cancel a pre-arranged meeting; or he doesn't see her for several days, perhaps offering some negligible excuse or none at all for his absence.

* * * *

Such off-hand treatment is easier obviated than cured. It's an old, old story that the average girl must keep the average man guessing if she would hold his whole interest indefinitely. She should never permit her meetings with a given man to fall into a mathematically predictable classification; she should never let him suppose he knows all there is to know about her personal life and potential actions and interests. There should always be some doubt in his mind as to whether he is the indispensable axis of her universe.

* * * *

The moment she senses any shadow of taken-for-grantedness falling across their relationship, the girl should inject an element of adventurous uncertainty into their meetings. This can be done by introducing a rival admirer into the picture, whose attentions she accepts without seeming to take them too seriously; or it can be done by going away unexpectedly on little trips; or by developing some new interest in life, or by cultivating some neglected talent, which will occupy part of the time hitherto given without question to the steady beau; or by planning future engagements with family and girl friends which will necessarily interfere, now and again, with what has been the man's routine schedule of calling. The whole idea is to convey the impression that the girl finds life full and interesting in the man's absence as well as in his presence.

* * * *

Where casual neglect already exists and must be dealt with, I would advise a girl not to betray by so much as the flick of an eyelash any concern over the man's indifference. Her best defense is a counter offensive, which means she must start planning her days ahead so that when the man calls she will have a previous engagement for the evening first suggested. Without overtly exerting herself to be attractive, she should be impersonally gay, stimulating and as pretty as she can make herself, on those occasions when she does see him. And she should sweetly and subtly, but definitely, deflect any overtures he makes toward a resumption of lovemaking on a matter-of-fact basis. The time has come for her to guard her favors. She must restore the courtship to the original basis, where the man is definitely the pursuer.

* * * *

With regard to your second question: There are only two ways of arriving at a "complete understanding" of a man's matrimonial plans. One way is to use the direct conversational approach. The other is to give him such serious competition for your hand that he is forced to speak out or forever hold his peace.

If he actually has marriage in mind, one approach is about as good as the other. If you have the courage to try the former method, just take a deep breath and plunge in. However, if your psychic sixth sense prompts you to let the matter ride for a while longer, don't let your aunt or anyone else worry you into demanding a declaration. Too many potential unions are nipped in the bud by just such family meddling. M. H.

Wet Sponge Provides Garden for Children

Children always are interested in growing things and it is possible for a child anywhere to have a green, growing plant without even a jar of dirt to plant it in. Take a large, porous sponge, soak it thoroughly in warm water and place it in a saucer.

Sprinkle any kind of seeds—grass, lettuce or radish, etc.—lightly over the sponge. Soon the seed with start to grow and you will have a lovely green ball. For festive occasions you can tie a few cut flowers in the sponge and you have a beautiful centerpiece.

Old-Fashioned Trend Will Prevail This Summer

A smart coat-dress of black alpaca, simple and youthful in styling. It may also serve as a topcoat as illustrated, worn over a silk or cotton frock, with the frock collar and sleeve border serving as the color accent.

Honey beige grosgrain fashions a clever frock with brown plastic slide fastener extending down the entire length of the front, matching leather belt trim and silk ascot scarf. A perfect frock for both spring and summer.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

TURNING to the old album and bicycle days for 1937 fashion inspiration apparently has not ceased. It was evidenced in the spring millinery to a large degree, and will appear in the summer hat mode, according to previews held recently in the merchandise market. To be smartly attired, according to the latest dictates of fashion, is to be groomed in the old-fashioned materials, like those your grandmother wore.

These new-old fabrics are not modernized to any degree, except in the styling, and are as successful in the streamline effects of today as they were in the more complicated treatments of yesteryear. Alpaca heads the present list of old-fashioned materials, resurrected for current smart suits and frocks; particularly, the shiny, black alpaca, reminiscent of the '90's. Bengaline and grosgrain, which appeared earlier in the season, usually as a trimming medium, are now much in evidence, styled in entire costumes.

Alpaca is sponsored as a late spring and early summer fabric, as being cool, and not prone to wrinkling easily; it also is said to clean very satisfactorily and wear indefinitely. Grosgrain is appearing in very attractive print jacket-frocks, dark backgrounds with white flower patterns. Bengaline, as a summer evening coat material is giving other fabrics keen competition; for both full-length coats and short, cocktail jackets.

As these materials, like grosgrain or bengaline, are ribbed, or in the case of alpaca, has surface and texture interest, it is imperative that they be fashioned along simple lines. The fabrics themselves, plus clever manipulation, are sufficient to carry the burden of style details, without benefit of intricate trimming. The creations now on display in the stores and shops, comprise softly tailored suits and very simple one-piece frocks; accented by a bit of contrasting color, buttons or plastic slide fasteners.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, April 15.

A FEW DAYS AGO, at a classy Waldorf-Astoria luncheon party, Tobe Coller Davis, fashion consultant to over 100 of the Nation's best stores, and Julia Coburn, just resigned as fashion editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, took the wraps off the most interesting adventure of the day, as far as our girls are concerned. They announced to the 75 ladies and gents present the completed plans for their new School for Fashion Careers, which begins its first semester next September, and is the first institution of its kind to prepare girls of 21 and over, with some background and personality, for executive jobs in department and specialty stores.

ALICE HUGHES

Tobe and Julia told us many interesting things about the new venture, which has already opened offices in Rockefeller Center. Most important of all, many famous stores have hailed the venture with delight, and have demanded the best girl graduates of its first class.

Up to the moment girls in the fashion business, in whatever branch, have been forced to make their way by the haphazard and silly system of trial-and-error, which is bad both for the store and the miss. The new school will give ambitious and clever girls both the theory of such work and actual field practice in large stores during the Christmas and Easter periods of rush.

The annual tariff, $700, may seem stiff, but the first graduates are practically certain of jobs in strategic spots. The whole idea is fascinating and practical—so much so that one of the leading women executives on the Avenue was tempted to give up her job and join in. I'm pardonably proud, I think, of being numbered among the first eight professors. My helpmate, who attended the luncheon, offered to act as dean of women absolutely free of charge, but was turned down cold by the twin prexies, Tobe and Julia.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—We made a serious mistake when we asked Mrs. Joseph E. Davis, wife of the current Ambassador to Russia, how her frozen vittles went over in the land of the Soviets. The Post-Toasties Queen refused that bait, but the Ambassador was very nice about everything, and said that Russia was practically capitalistic now, and thus chemically pure. But he's chiefly proud of the fact that his daughter, Emlen, is not only writing poetry, but actually selling it for money. She's peddled no less than five chunks of verse, which is almost a professional career as a poet, these days!

* * * *

My friend Helen Worden, who knows more about New York than any ten girls you can name, has been checked pretty caustically on a story she recently wrote on the history of the Vanderbilt clan here. Helen's critic says that there were several generations of the family here prior to the famous "Commodore," and that a good old Dutchman named Aert van der Bilt settled on Long Island way back in the days when the Hollanders were still dickering with the noble Redskins over the price of the barren rock now known as "Manhattan Island." As for the whole matter, what's a dozen eggs today?

The great city of Cleveland, Ohio, is in for a terrific summer with the second edition of its excellent fair on the bank of Lake Erie. It is going to be forced to cope with Mr. Billy Rose, the small husband of the big Miss Fannie Brice, and with Mr. Rose's minister of public relations, Mr. Richard Maney, the maddest press agent that ever drove a dramatic editor out of his addled wits. But they'll stage a swell aquatic show, crazy or not. They've lined up La Belle Eleanor Holm Jarrettt as their star, with such male beauties as Johnny "Tarzan" Weismuller and Dick Degener for support. There'll be a lot of places I shan't go this summer—but Cleveland won't be one of them! I would not miss it!

The more stylish New York hospitals have most of the aspects of a very fancy hotel—the only trouble being that from time to time they are forced to admit sick people. I hear that Mrs. J. Sergeant Cram (name, not rank) while hospitalized with a busted ankle, gave a cocktail party in her suite, annoying some of the old guard. How silly! As my favorite chatterer says, "Do you drink with your ankle?"

Advice Given For Expectant Shop Mothers

Study Shows Illness and Mortality Rate Higher for This Type.

HEALTH of the industrial population the world over has been affected gravely because mothers have had to work. This has been revealed in an international study of health conditions made by Dr. Rene Sand, health officer of Belgium. Dr. Sand's findings have been released by the Maternity Center Association of New York in connection with the observance of Mother's Day, May 2.

Dr. Sand has found that death and sickness among working mothers is higher than among men, while the contrary is the case in other women of the same age. Her report shows that when a woman works in factory, mill or shop, fertility is diminished, abortion is more frequent, the percentage of abnormal labor is higher, mortality at birth and infant mortality are increased and the length and weight of the newborn are reduced.

The working mother must take added precautions when she is expecting a baby. Dr. Sand advocates that she should receive leave pay and be excused from work during the two months preceding birth and for two months following it. She should be given every facility to care for her baby and she should be required to attend prenatal and infant clinics.

In the absence of such a system, expectant mothers should be given lighter work to do, should be allowed longer rest periods, and should not be required to stand for long hours at a time, but, more than that, they should consult a competent doctor at the beginning and should follow his instructions to the letter. A good doctor will keep an especially close watch on the working mother to find abnormalities and complications as soon as they develop.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Iodine is a necessary ingredient of the human body, although of all the minerals in the body it is present in about the smallest amount by weight. The activity of the thyroid gland is dependent upon the presence of a certain amount of iodine and it cannot function without it. How the body got into the position so that it requires iodine for its function must go back a long way, to the time when all animals lived in the sea. As the human body gradually evolved, no matter how far the individual body got away from sea water, this necessity for iodine persisted.

Now, iodine is among the rarest minerals on earth, and while a man needs a quantity of iodine the size of a grain of wheat to supply his needs for a whole year, in many parts of the world it is impossible to obtain this much.

If iodine is lacking in the soil or food of a certain region, this lack, in the course of time, shows itself by a universal tendency to enlargement of the thyroid gland, or goiter, in that region. The southern part of the United States is the only large area in this country that was submerged and thoroughly soaked in sea water during the late geologic period, and a great deal of iodine still remains in its soil, and in that part of the country simple goiter is far less common than in the northern parts around the lake regions.

Iodine was discovered because Napoleon was short of gunpowder. A blockade had shut him off from Chilean saltpeter and he called on a chemist to produce an artificial substitute. A chemist, Courtois, attempted to make saltpeter by treating calcium nitrate wih he ash of seaweed. While doing these experiments, he noticed some black scales on the sides of the vats he had been using, and investigation revealed the presence of pure iodine.

Iodine is used in medicine as an external antiseptic in the form of tincture of iodine, and internally as a drug in several forms. It can be obtained from kelp grown on the bed of the ocean, and this is the best commercial source.

Its use in the prevention of goiter dates from fairly recent times, although as early a s1820 in Michigan sheep began to die from lack of iodine. Domestic animals under any circumstances are vrey sensitive to deficiency of iodine in their diet. In regions where the soil contains iodine, the leafy parts of plants and grasses are rich in the substance.

The first experiment on the prevention of human goiter was done at Akron, Ohio, by Marine and Kimball, in 1917. They selected a group of children in school and gave each of them sodium iodide daily for a period of ten days, the course being repeated twice a year for a period of three years. In control groups of about 2,000 children, five in the group which had received iodine developed an enlargement of the thyroid gland, while 495 in the group to whom no iodine was given, developed goiter.

Pimiento Bisque Offers Tasty Dish at Dinner

By Rebekah Blake.

TOO OFTEN PIMIENTO is used just as a little garnish. Of course the bright touch of red does add sparkle to food, but why use it just as a garnish? Why not use it as the main flavor? It is because of lack of full attention to this garnish helper that this recipe is given for pimiento bisque.

Pimiento Bisque

2 cans chicken broth
1 can mushroom broth
4 canned pimientoes
½ cup rice
½ cup cream
2 egg yolks.

Pour the chicken and mushroom broth into the top of a double boiler. Bring broth to boiling, add the rice, which has been well washed, and stir it into the broth; set in bottom part of double boiler and cook until rice is tender, or about half an hour. Rub the pimiento through a sieve and add to the hot broth and rice mixture. Blend the cream with the egg yolks and add to the bisque, stirring constantly until thoroughly mixed.

Instead of using the mushroom broth the bisque can be made of all chicken broth, in which case use three cans of it.

It may be necessary to add extra salt, but taste the bisque before doing so as the broth is seasoned and an extra amount without trying may prove too much.

If there are any pimientoes left in the can, pour a little salad oil over them and keep the can covered in the refrigerator. After the last of the pimientoes have been used, use the oil in making French dressing, as the delicate flavor of the pimientoes will improve it.

Hostesses From Iowa Entertain Mrs. Gillette

Members of the Democratic Iowa delegation to Congress frequently have pot-luck dinners, picnics and other gay informal gatherings. Yesterday five of the wives, Mrs. Fred Biermann, Mrs. Edward C. Eicher, Mrs. Vincent F. Harrington, Mrs. William S. Jacobsen and Mrs. Otha D. Wearin, entertained at a large luncheon at the Mayflower in honor of Mrs. Guy M. Sunshine and Flowers Color Tea in Legation

By Lynda Reeve.

An atmosphere of sunshine pervaded the Czechoslovakian legation at the tea given yesterday afternoon by the Minister and Mme. Hurban.

The late afternoon sun was streaming through the tall windows of the drawing room, salon and dining room, and everywhere were bouquets of colorful spring blossoms. Mme. Hurban carried out this motif still further in her long trailing tea gown, which was of a spritely printed chiffon of tones of cream, yellow and orange with touches of blue and green.

The Minister and Mme. Hurban received in the central drawing room, where the guests tarried to chat before going into the dining room, where the tea table was set, or into the library, where cocktails were being served.

Practically the first to arrive were Senora de Alfaro, petite wife of the Ambassador of Eucador, gowned in black with puffed sleeves of crisp embroidered white organdy, and Senora de Boyd, wife of the Minister of Panama, who also chose back for her costume, her frock having as trimming rows of tiny pearl buttons.

Among those gathered about the tea table were Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, whose chic black cape ensemble fashioned with corded tucks was topped off with a black turban covered with white blossoms; Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife fo the Secretary of the Navy, wearing a spring outfit of dark blue with clusters of flowers; Mrs. William D. Leahy, wife of the Chief of Naval Operations; Gen. Dione Williams, Mrs. William E. Borah, wearing a tan redingote over a blue and white printed frock; Mrs. William Jennings Price, in black with a soft lustrous bow of black and white dotted satin at the neck; Baroness von Below and Mrs. Ernest Draper, whose black frock was of simple design with a high neckline.

Mme. Saito, wife of the Ambassador of Japan was attired in bottle green with black hat and accessories; the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de Castillo Najera, she in black with a small shallow-crowned hat of glossy straw, were accompanied by Senorita Lulu Quintanilla, and the Second Secretary of the Embassy, Senor Dr. Don Manuel Gonzalez y Gonzalez.

Others at the reception were Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador, who had just come from a party given in her honor at the Newspaper Women's Club; the Minister of Latvia and Mme. Bilmanis, she costumed in dark brown with touches of turquoise blue at the neck; the First Secretary of the Egyptian Legation, Mr. Anis Azer, who was surprised and delighted when his host greeted him in Arabic; the Minister of the Irish Free State, Mr. Michael MacWhite; Mrs. William Mark Conrad, Maj. and Mrs. Parker West, the latter wearing a three-quarter length dark blue cape over her print frock; Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol; the Attache of the Rumania Legation, Mr. Laurence Bungardeanu; Mr. Michael Budny, and Mrs. John T. H. Mitchell and her daughter, Miss Ann Mitchell, of New York, who are here for a brief visit.

Also attending the party were Mrs. Henry F. Ashurst, Mme. Babes, wife of the Secretary of the Czechoslovakian Legation; Mrs. Thomas Healy, costumed in soft gray with black accents and a silver fox scarf; the Ambassador of Turkey, Mr. Mehmet Munir Ertegun, and the First Secretary of his Embassy, Mr. Resid Anamur; Mr. William K. Ryan, the Minister of Yugoslavia and Mme. Fotitch, the latter in dark brown, and the First Secretary of their Legation and Mme. Perazic, she in a smart drak blue tailleur, and Mr. Rastko Petrovic; the retiring Naval Attache of the French Embassy, Admiral Louis Sable; the First Secretary of the Argentine Embassy, Senor Dr. Don Hector Diaz Leguizamon; the Minister of Denmark, Mr. Otto Wadsted; Mrs. Millard Tydings, Mrs. Emlen Knight Davies and the Counselor of the German Embassy and Frau Thomsen.

Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, assisted at the tea table. Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, also was among the guests.

THE MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn.

Seeing a long maroon roadster swing around Dupont Circle, our eyes traveled to the driver's seat and there saw Elizabeth Sibley, swathed in green tweed and lynx.

Continuing on out Massachusetts avenue, a huge sleek limousine shot past us and from the back seat Suzanne Wilson, daughter of Secretary Perkins, waved us cheery hello. It is fun to look about you, try it some time.

* * * *

And how very careful one must be when talking to someone who is not quite "on" to English as it is used in America. For instance, Mrs. Key Pittman was in New York City at a large party not so long ago. The butler was making the rounds armed with cream and sugar and carefully tending to the needs of those drinking coffee. When he started pouring the cream into her cup she, busily engaged in a conversation with her neighbor, briefly turned and politely said: "Oh, plenty——" and resumed her chatting. A split second passed and she again turned to the butler, who, a bit befuddled, was still continuing to pour cream into the rapidly filling cup—again Mrs. Pittman said, "Plenty," trying to dismiss the solicitous servant and seeing she already had quite enough cream. But—alas, the butler, who incidentally was a foreigner, and one of those who takes our language literally, saw to it that the nice person he was serving had "plenty" of the cream. The result—all of which took place in much shorter time than we can tell it—was that the next time the guest turned to the retainer, he was completely bewildered and the by-now very light tan drinkable was overflowing the cup into the saucer . . .

And while on the subject of "unusual" drinks—we are reminded of the experience of a young lady here attending a tea at one of the embassies. She approached the pretty person who was pouring. The hostess, wife of one of the members of the staff, inquired of the guest how she would have her tea—the guest looking at the sliced lemon dotted with cloves and other spices to be dropped nonchalantly in the tea, asked for her cup "plain." And the result? She got a cup of very hot, very plain water. Let these be warnings.

Two very nice luncheons on the calendar of the near future are those to be given, the first on Tuesday by Mrs. William C. Sullivan, in her attractive home in Chevy Chase—and the second at the Shoreham on April 24 by Marjorie Jane Dampman.

The Ray Muirs' home out in Massachusetts Avenue Park extended has a very able watch dog, and don't you fool yourself. Topsy, a one-person dog, who just worships Mrs. Muir is a fiercely growling little Pekingese. The little fellow has the heart and soul of a much larger canine, however, and looks with longing after Ray when he starts out for an afternoon of golf.

Old and New Paintings Shown at Two Exhibits

By Dudley Harmon.

Art exhibits instead of cocktail parties held the spotlight yesterday between the hours of 5 and 7. Old and new masters were on view at the Phillips Memorial Gallery for the benefit of the National Symphony Orchestra, and there also was an exhibition of paintings held by Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, Miss Georgianna Todd, Miss Elizabeth Poe and her sister, Mrs. Vylla Poe Wilson, at the residence of Miss Poe and Mrs. Wilson, 3307 Cleveland avenue.

To judge by the number at the gallery, the National Symphony must have benefited substantially by the show. More than 100 were present to view the masters from the Mellon collection, which he has given to the city from Mr. Duncan Phillips' treasures; a Rembrandt belonging to Mr. and Mrs. F. Dammot Belin; the "St. Francis in Ecstasy" of El Greco, recently purchased by the Greek Minister, and many other fine pictures.

Mrs. Phillips herself not only was present, but also had a painting in the exhibit, a delicately-done picture of a small vase of flowers. Mrs. Morgenthau was an early arrival, wearing a black tailored coat and a sailor hat to match.

Beginning Painters.

The Cleveland avenue exhibit was unique in that none of the exhibitors took to a brush until two years ago. Mrs. McLean and Miss Todd had several lessons at Friendship, Mrs. McLean's home, but beyond that have never studied. Miss Poe's work has won high critical praise and she has exhibited at Studio House and also at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, where she was awarded a prize last season.

Mrs. McLean is out of town, but the other three artists were there.

The paintings were hung from the first floor to the third. Miss Poe, whose work is done entirely from imagination, showed more paintings than the others. Mrs. McLean was represented by a Western landscape and a picture of a book which showed a slight surrealist influence. Mrs. Wilson's pictures included one of Edgar Allan Poe, an ancestor, and Miss Todd showed several paintings of animals and a picture of a slum alley in Washington.

Mrs. Clark Exhibited.

Although her name was not on the card issued for the event, Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, wife of Senator Clark, showed several architectural drawings. She took high honors in this study at Vassar. Her young son, Champ, exhibited some interesting cartoons on the third floor, one of which was of his father, and bore quite a resemblance to Benjamin Franklin.

Among those who attended this exhibit were Mrs. Harry Meem, with her daughters, Anne and Gertrude, who also studied painting with Mrs. McLean at Friendship; Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock; Mrs. Phillip Coffin, who recently took up painting; Mr. Ralph Snowden Hill, with his guest, Mrs. Jabez Jackson, of Kansas City, widow of Dr. Jackson, who was president of the American Medical Association; Miss Eleanor Connolly; Mrs. Nicholas Lohgworth, Mme. von Numers, Mrs. Frank Letts, Mrs. Ollie James, Mrs. Frederick Keep, Miss Edith Hoyt and Miss Clara Saunders, both artists; Mrs. Newbold Noyes, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Franklin Gates, of Studio House; Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt, Mrs. Richard Oulahan, Mrs. Harold Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Poe, cousins of the hostesses; Mrs. Eugene Roberts and Mrs. Robert Low Bacon.

Mrs. George Barnett assisted.

New League Glee Club to Sing Tonight

Concert at Headquarters Will Feature Gilbert and Sullivan Airs.

Group Organized Last Fall Will Appear at Call of Institutions.

A concert is to be presented this evening at the Junior League Headquarters by the Junior League Glee Club. Only members and their friends will be present, but the event is an important one for it is the first of its kind ever given there.

The glee club, started last autumn under the direction of Mr. Henry Gregor, is one of the newest Junior League activities and is under the chairmanship of Mrs. Beale Bloomer. It has been rehearsing regularly on Tuesday mornings and, night before last, gave a program at the Foundry Methodist Church, proceeds of which went to charity. There were about 200 in the audience. It also will give musicales on request of institutions in and near the District.

The league headquarters will not accommodate a large crowd tonight so it is expected an S. R. O. sign will be required before the concert starts. No admission charge is being made, but a collection will be taken to add to the league's social service fund.

The soloists of the evening will be Miss Dorothy Tirrell, Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, Mrs. Jennings Bailey, jr., Mrs. John Ward Cutler and Mrs. David St. Pierre Gaillard. A quartet of husbands of Junior League members has been drafted for the occasion to sing with the chorus, which is presenting an all Gilbert and Sullivan program, with familiar songs from various of the operas. The quartet is composed of Mr. John W. Cutler, Mr. Philip Larner, Mr. Robert F. Wilson and Mr. A. Z. Foster Wood.

Baer Outfought in Bloody Battle With British Titlist

Hogan's Hit in 9th With 3 On, Beats Bees, 5-4

This Morning

Hank Gowdy Visits His Washington Pals.

By Shirley Povich.

That tall, gaunt fellow with the red hair, spindly shanks and streamlined facial features who was superintending the Boston Bee's batting practice at Griffith Stadium yesterday would most certainly be Hank Gowdy, this department reasoned.

POVICH.

It was. Old Hank was back at Griffith Stadium, scene of his individual tragedy in 1924 when the New York Giants encountered Walter Johnson in that disastrous seventh game of the World Series with Washington. Bucky Harris was the boy manager then, Hank Gowdy the No. 1 catcher of John McGraw's Giants.

The memory of that seventh world series game still rankles with Gowdy. But for his own misfortune, the Giants might have gone on to win it. He said so, yesterday.

Tripped Over Mask!

"Talk about luck," reminisced the old catcher, "ours was pathetic. We had Muddy Ruel out in that twelfth inning, when for the first time in 15 years of catching I tripped over my mask and dropped his pop fly.

"This Ruel hadn't made a hit in 20 times at bat in the series. He was a sucker for our pitchers and in the twelfth inning of that last game he popped one up over the plate and it looked like a duck-soup catch for me. I threw off my mask and started for the ball and then stumbled over it.

* * *

"I kicked that mask out of the way, I still had plenty of time to make the catch, and darned if it didn't bounce back right in my path. Just as I reached for the ball, I stepped on it again, and went down, dropping the ball. Then Ruel steps up to the plate again and gets a double that starts Washington's winning run—his first hit in the series."

Swell Ground Keeper!

And then Gowdy suddenly recalled the sad finish of the game. Hey, how about that hit McNeely got to bring Ruel in with the winning run. That thing that hit that pebble and bounced over Lindstrom's head. That was cheesey. Don't forget, Bucky Harris got the same kind of a hit to drive in a Washington run back in the early innings.

"I allus said after that that the best man the Washington club had during that series was the ground keeper."

* * *

Down at Fort Benning, Ga., they have a baseball field dedicated to Old Hank—Gowdy Field, they call it. Hank is probably big league baseball's outstanding World War hero. He was the first big leaguer to enlist after the United States declared war on Germany in April, 1917, and he still believes he should have been given a better break by the War Department.

Saw Plenty of Action

It quit an $8,000-a-year job with the Boston Braves to enlist in the 166th Infantry, the Rainbow Division, at $30 a month when the first call for volunteers came," explained Hank. "Saw 20 months of action over there at St. Mihiel, Chateau Thierry and every place where things were hottest, but apparently that didn't count.

* * *

"Anyway, when the armistice was signed and the Braves offered me my catching job back, the Army wouldn't muster me out. Sent me to Germany with the Army of Occupation and I lost a whole year's baseball pay. I must have been a valuable guy to the Army, I guess, but I wasn't doing the Gowdy family any good over there at $30 a month."

There's Jim O'Leary!

A stout, white-haired figure emerged from the Braves' dug-out and headed toward the press box, giving Gowdy a wave of recognition, "Hi, Jim," said Hank, and then he turned to this department.

"See that old gent there? Know who he is? Well, that's Jim O'Leary. Been writing baseball for the Boston Globe longer'n I remember. The Braves will never forget him.

"He was the guy who called the turn on us to win the pennant in 1914 when we were in last place. We were a bad last, too, and it was a 20-to-1 bet that we wouldn't finish in the first division.

"We won two games that day, it was a holiday double-header, on July 4, and then we took a train to New York. Jim O'Leary was traveling with us. 'They can't stop us now,' yelled Jim, 'this club's gonna win the pennant.'

"We laughed at him."

Blow Gives Nats 2 Runs To Cap Rally

Uprising Erases 4-to-1 Deficit; Griffs Outhit; Weaver Pitches.

By Shirley Povich.

J. Francis Hogan grimly wiped his hands on his pantlegs and then wiped out the last remains of a three-run deficit that had confronted the Nats in the ninth inning yesterday at Griffith Stadium, where the Boston Bees had been rollicking along with a 4-1 lead.

At the time, two runs were in, the bases were jammed with Nats, and, with the elephantine figure of Hogan at the plate, the batter's box was not exactly empty. But big Hogan didn't tarry long. He rapped a single into centerfield, two colleagues crossed the plate and Washington won the ball game, 5-4.

Washington whooped it up in that ninth as 1,000 muttering fans, disgusted at the Nats' failures for eight innings, started to make for the exits. Without warning, the Nats, who had made only five hits off Boston rookie pitching, began to win the ball game.

Joe Kuhel, who had driven in the only Washington run previously, patiently waited for a walk and big Fred Sington breathed some life into the uprising with a single to center. Johnny Stone's walk filled the bases with none as yet out and Cecil Travis then made his appearance.

Travis whacked a 3-and-2 pitch toward leftfield and Third Baseman Garms somehow managed to knock it down with his glove, but Kuhel crossed the plate on the blow and Travis was safe at first, leaving the bases still filled.

Off Buddy Myer's bat rocketed a whistling drive that Second Baseman Cuccinello came up with and then in his anxiety to start a double play scooped the ball wildly past Warstler, and Sington scored from third, reducing the Bees' lead to 4-3 and leaving the bases still filled.

It was at this point that Mr. Hogan appeared. The Boston infield was playing in close for double-play purposes. Hogan looked at one strike, fouled another o and then bashed out a stinging single through the infield that scored Stone and Travis and extracted the sting from the Bees.

Again, yesterday, the Bees outhit the Nats, 10 to 8, but for four innings it was a scoreless duel between Monte Weaver and Ira Hutchinson, a Boston rookie from Indianapolis, each allowing only two hits, but Weaver fell on evil times in the fifth.

Al Lopez whacked a double that tore through Freddie Sington's glove and, with two out, Joe Kuhel prolonged the Bees' rally with a poor throw to Weaver at first after a clever stop of Garms' hot grounder. Vince DiMaggio, who authored three extra-base hits for the Braves before the game was over, banged a triple over Sington's head to score Lopez and Garms, and when Joe Moore followed with a single to center, the Braves had a 3-to-0 lead.

The Nats found Perrin in the box for the Bees in the sixth after Hutchinson had shut 'em out with three hits in five innings and then retrieved one run almost immediately when Buddy Lewis doubled to right and Kuhel singled to center. But the Braves upped their lead to 4 to 1 in the seventh on DiMaggio's second double of the game.

Jamaica Win Is Pompoon's Derby Notice

Conceding 9 to 20 Pounds, Colt Easily Captures Paumonok Purse.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 15.—Showing no desire to quit, J. H. Louchheim's Pompoon opened his pre-Kentucky Derby campaign today with a smashing victory over nine more experienced rivals in the Paumonok Handicap as the New York racing season got under way with 15,000 fans packing remodeled Jamaica.

The historic stake was at 6 furlongs, as compared to the Derby distance of a mile and a quarter, but Pompoon, one of the three leading choices for the Churchill Downs classic, May 8, ran a race that stamped him as something more than just a sprinter.

Picking up 116 pounds and conceding from 9 to 20 pounds by scale to his opponents, the son of Pompey came from off the pace to win under the expert guidance of Harry Richards. At the finish he was a neck in front of Marshall Field's Tintagel, himself a favorite for the 1936 Derby until he displayed only sprinting ability. Hal Price Headley's Fraidy Cat was another five lengths back, showing the way to a field that included two former winners of the stake and a world record holder.

Pompoon, winner of $82,360 as jfluvenile champion last year, was clocked in the fast time of 1:11 in adding another $7,250 to his earnings.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase Golfers Top Rockville

Sports in Brief

New York, April 15 (AP).—Pedro Montanez, bidding for a lightweight title shot, flattened Eddie Ran, of Poland, in six rounds of their wind-up bout at Star Casino tonight. The heavy-hitting Puerto Rican put him away in 1 minute, 15 seconds of the sixth frame, after administering a sound drubbing throughout to the Pole.

Luray, Va.—Wild Lady, owned by Dr. T. C. Shore, of Booneville, N. C., carried off honors in both puppy stakes of the Page Valley field trials here today.

Hill City Tom, owned by Carl Hopkins, of Lynchburg, was second in the junior puppy, and Doones Skippy, owned by Dr. Shore, was third. How Branch Willing, trained by Ray Shenk and owned by Fritz Sitterding, of Richmond, placed second in the senior puppy trials. Shore's Dr. Doone was third.

New York.—Dick Shikat, 228, Columbus, Ohio, won a decision over Robert Bruns, 217, Germany, in a wrestling bout which ended after 52 minutes, 13 seconds, at the Hippodrome tonight.

In attempting a flying tackle, Bruns plunged out of the ring and landed in the third row of spectators. He was knocked unconscious and counted out.

Hoyas Play Nats Today; 'Flop' Sold

Salveson Wished Off on Coast Club; Offer for Ruffing Denied.

Georgetown's ambitious diamond squad steps out of the schoolboy class this afternoon for a shot at older and tougher major league opposition. Opposing the Hoyas will be Washington's entry in the 1937 pennant race.

Manager Bucky Harris, pulling no punches as the Nats taper off for the regular season's schedule, will start Pete Appleton on the mound against the Collegians. Appleton is scheduled to pitch the full nine innings.

Georgetown's biggest obstacle this afternoon will not be Washington, as you might imagine, but stage fright.

Griffith Denies Offer To Yanks for Ruffing

A report that the Washington ball team was angling for the services of Charley Ruffing, hold-out pitcher of the Yankees, was denied by Owner Clark Griffith yesterday.

"We have made no offer for Ruffing," said Griffith. "It is not my policy to buy hold-outs. It isn't ethical for one club owner to make an offer for a player who is a hold-out."

Ruffing has refused to sign a Yankee contract calling for $15,000. He is demanding an extra $1,000 for his pinch-hitting services.

Salveson Is Sold Back to Coast Club

Clark Griffith wrote a gratifying finish to what had been one of the most dismal chapters in his history as a trader of baseball flesh yesterday when he announced that Pitcher Jack Salveson had been sold to the Los Angeles team of the Coast League by the Nats.

Griffith refused to reveal the sum obtained for Salveson from the Los Angeles club, but it is believed that he was disposed of at the $7,500 waiver price. According to reports, the Chicago Cubs, who own the Los Angeles franchise, claimed the pitcher and turned him over to the Coast League team.

Salveson won 21 games in the Coast League last season.

Griffith had attempted in vain to sell Whitehill to a major league club last winter at the $7,500 waiver price, he said.

'Farr' From Title

MAXIE BAER, the former heavyweight champion of the world, had his umpteenth "comeback" campaign stopped short last night by Tommy Farr, heavyweight champion of England.

Detroit Beats Rangers; Win Stanley Cup

Red Wings Retain World Title, Take 3-0 Tilt From N. Y.

By the United Press.

Detroit, April 15.—The Detroit Red Wings won their second consecutive world's hockey championship tonight by defeating the New York Rangers, 3 to 0, in the fifth and final game of the Stanley Cup series.

Before a wildly cheering crowd of 14,102 fans, the Wings, who won the National League title two weeks ago, scored once in each period and offered a defense that the Rangers found almost impossible to penetrate.

At the opening whistle the Rangers began an aggressive attack, driving hard for a score and succeeding in monopolizing the Red Wing half of the ice. It was this ambitious attack, however, which led indirectly to a Detroit score. Cooper, Ranger defenseman, was in the penalty box for holding Herbie Lewis against the boards.

Miss Rawls Sets Record, Keeps Title

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 15.—Katherine Rawls, the 19-year-old aquatic marvel from Miami Beach, Fla., who looks 14, successfully defended her national women's indoor A. A. U. 100-yard breast-stroke title tonight, set a new record in doing it, and sent her club well into the lead toward the team championship.

Arlite Smith, of the Lake Shore Club, dethroned her teammate, Marion Mansfield, as low-board diving champion, reversing the order of their finish last year. Miss Smith piled up a point-score of 128.55 to 120.25 for Miss Mansfield. Barbara Cook, of the Indianapolis A. C., scored 108.72 points for third, while Jeanne Hershberger, of the Columbus, Ohio, A. C., was fourth with 105.99.

The Washington Athletic Club, of Seattle, scored a six-length victory in the 400-yard relay. The Athletic Club, of Columbus, Ohio, was second and the Lake Shore A. C., of Chicago, was third.

It was the third straight year the veteran coast team captured the relay. The champion's time was 4:19, almost 6 seconds slower than last year.

Jean Kolinski gave Seattle a slim lead at the start. Betty Lea, Doris Buckley and Olive McKean Mucha gradually lengthened it in the next 300 yards.

Adolph Kiefer, of Chicago, shattered four more American backstroke swimming records for the second successive night. Swimming easily, he bettered listed marks for 150 yards, 200 meters, 220 yards and 300 yards.

Jack Kasley, of the University of Michigan, bettered the listed American record for the 150-yard breast stroke in an exhibition.

Upset Loser Takes 3 Rounds; Sarron Wins

(Wirephoto Picture on Page 20.)

By the Associated Press.

London, April 15.—Max Baer's campaign comeback by way of England was halted suddenly and decisively tonight when Tommy Farr, the vastly under-rated British Empire champion, used a forked lightning left hook to beat the tar out of him before 14,000 cheering British fans at Harringay arena.

Baer, fighting his first major battle since Joe Louis knocked him out in September of 1935, never really got started. The Briton, who promised before the battle he would vindicate the reputation of British heavyweights, waded into the American from the start, opened a cut over Baer's eye in the opening round, and hammered at this wide red target throughout the bout.

Smiling confidently as ever, even when in the eighth and ninth the Briton battered him against the ropes, Baer's comeback ended where it began. Only in the seventh round, when he stopped trying for a one-punch knockout, did the American look good. The rest of the time the British champion had a long edge.

Both went at it so furiously in the ninth round that the referee had to break them at the bell. In full confidence he had he better of the battle, Farr had all the better of it in this round. He battered the American with powerful lefts, and the one-time champion of the world had no defense.

Baer tried hard to regain lost ground in the tenth and dealt out severe body punishment to the Welshman, but Farr fought back all the more fiercely and forced the American back with a two-fisted attack.

Both fighters were bleeding from the face in the last two rounds. Baer tried desperately to land a knockout punch in the eleventh and twelfth, but Farr could not be hit. The crowd kept up a terrific din in the closing minutes as it was obvious the Briton couldn't lose.

Farr gave away 10 pounds. He scaled 198 to the American's 208, but there was no indication that this was much of a handicap.

Farr, who was on the short end of 3-1 odds when the bout started and entered the ring as a sort of sacrificial lamb, left it as a new important figure in the pugilistic world.

There wasn't a dissenting voice even from Baer's corner when Referee C. N. Douglas lifted the Welshman's brawny arm at the end of the punishing 12 rounds.

A fashionable audience, which had come to see the handsome former world champion take the scowling Welshman apart, remained to cheer the winner long after he had danced jubilantly out of the ring toward his dressing room.

As it happened to him on the unfortunate night he dropped his heavyweight championship to James J. Braddock, Baer tonight simply tackled a man who knew all the answers.

United States fistic prestige, given a body blow by the Baer defeat, was partially upheld when little Petey Sarron, featherweight titleholder, handed one of England's best 126-pounders, named Mizler, a lop-sided 10-round beating in the main preliminary to the heavyweight doings.

Mrs. Denemark's Singing Slave's Sprint Wins Graw Feature

Kurtsinger Responsible For Victory

By the Associated Press.

Havre de Grace, Md., April 15.—Mrs. Emil Denemark's Singing Slave, educated by Florida racing last winter, bounded through the stretch to win the Shenandoah Purse, feature event of a cheap program this afternoon. With Charlie Kurtsinger, the veteran pilot, doing the urging, Singing Slave opened a length of daylight on Miss Oak, owned by J. P. Jones, and the favorite in the field of nine juvenile fillies. E. K. Bryson's Upslala gained third money after the spring of 4½ furlongs.

Singing Slave was popular with the betters and was installed the second choice, rewarding the faithful with a $6.80 mutuel.

Kurtsinger, riding his fourth winner in two days, has seldom shown any better form than in this race. Within striking distance of the pace of Miss Oak and Upslala from the start, Singing Slave tried to loaf entering the stretch. Kurtsinger was not caught napping. He went to work on his mount and rallied her into a drive that sent her up the middle of the track to win going away.

Miss Oak, a winner at Bowie, saved ground all the way, but could not match the Denemark-Kurtsinger combination in the final test. Upslala making the third start of her career, lugged in toward the rail through the stretch.

Joe O'Malley rode Golden Vein to an easy victory in the first race, the 6-year-old, owned by Mrs. P. De Lee Watts, stepping to the wire seven lengths in front of Happy Hostess. Acautaw was third in the group of 11 contesting at 6 furlongs. Happy Hostess took the lead early, but Golden Vein took command leaving the backstretch and it was all over but the $5.70 return to his backers. The winner, in the favored role, was timed in 1:14.

With 11 pounds the best of the weights, Masked Gal turned in a head victory over Our Crest, the favorite, in the second race. The daughter of Galetian was in front early and was powerfully handled by Apprentice Eccard. Our Crest was on the outside of the winner in the stretch and was wearing her down as the finish line loomed. Masked Gal stepped the 6 furlongs in 1:14 1-5, paid a $7.50 mutuel and completed a $19.80 daily double pay off.

At a $17.10 mutuel, Ipso Facto, owned by A. P. Mann, won the third race of the program. The little filly, ridden by Joe Wagner, stuck to her guns to have a lead of three parts of a length on Little Argo at the end. Cruising, one that had poor racing luck, was third. The winner ran the sprint route in 1:14.

Stewards announced that Jockey Eddie De Camillis had been suspended for the remainder of the meeting for striking Jockey Joe Wagner with his whip during the running of the third race.

Some Bull, which finished last when Dormido won a somewhat similar race at Bowie, finished first in the sixth race today, while Dormido was last. Some Bull, ridden by Joe Wagner, contested with Midshipman from the start and had a neck the best of the battle to the wire.

Fallen Jockey Carried From Track

At The Post . . . .

With Bill Bennings

Dear Al, Selections at Havre de Grace.

There is one phase of the race tracks with which the public is not familiar. That is the making up of the programs. Most race fans believe that there are always more horses than races for them. They will probably be surprised to learn that twice at this meeting Racing Secretary Charlie McLennan had to struggle and beg before he was able to put together a program for the next day. The second day of the meeting was a trying one for McLennan and the forming of yesterday's card must have given him several headaches. When the entries closed the scheduled feature race did not draw a single horse and the secondary feature attracted only one horse. McLennan then had to put on extra races and, as usual, the owners of the cheaper grade horses came to his rescue. By splitting races into sections he was able to get a program but an hour and a half after the usual time. There are plenty of cheap horses here ready to run. This track and the other Maryland ovals have mapped out too expensive conditions for races. They sort of pass up the cheap claimers. However, the cheap claimers are the backbone of racing all over the country. If it were not for the Pencaders, the Top Highs and the Zemblas, the tracks would have to limit their programs to three or four races each day. Then again, there is generally more betting on a ten-horse cheap field than a clash of six $6,000 sprinters.

First race—The entry of Grim Reaper and Smoke Signal seems to have a lock grip on the first race. Both scored in impressive fashion at Bowie. The mystery of the race is the Jeffords entry. Trainer Preston Burch sends Jolly Jack and Sudanese postward and they may be surprises. Hunting Home turned in a good last effort.

Second race—Bareback is said to be a good one. Will be making his first start in this but has not much to beat. Dunnamany ran many times last season without scoring. Fyan for the show.

Third race—Jinx is dropping far down and gets in with light weight. May find the right spot among these fillies. Catomar has some good races and is dangerous. Story Time for the minor award.

Fourth race—Touche appears most solid of those named for this sprint. Needs only to run her real race. True Tune's recent races are bad this one has downed much better fields in her time. Alahad should take a money position.

Fifth race—Green Melon, an easy winner in Florida last winter, may step down to take the chief honors here. Sir Quest turned in a promising effort last out and is a threat. Sunned may take the show cash.

Sixth race—Merry-Maker is the class of this field. This one will be priming for some of the big stakes, but even so, should down this kind. Muscatine and Trina to complete the money circle.

Seventh race—Scatterbrain was outclassed in that last. I'm tossing the effort out. Chance King and Hollyhock seem to have something on the others.

Best bet—Green Melon.

White Perch Here, Fishermen Hoping for Break in Weather

Present Run To Hit Peak This Sunday

By Bill Ackerman.

The Post's All Outdoors Editor.

Given a little better break in the weather over the coming week-end, there should be some real fun on the upper Potomac. Wednesday saw the initial run of white perch getting into its stride. Anywhere you cared to drop a baited line, they were there to take it. The average is still slightly on the small side with an occassional big one. So far the anglers that have been dropping down to Walkers Point and fishing the deep water have caught the largest fish.

ACKERMAN

So many have been going up with no small hooks in their kits, and the resulting catches are much smaller. Be sure and include at least one package of size No. 2 or No. 3 Carlisle hooks. They will hook the smaller fish and easily hold the larger ones.

A flyrod, with a split shot or two to carry your bait down will give you the best sport. It is even possible that the water has warmed enough for the perch to strike at a wet fly. Noted as being underwater feeders, the claims of many local fly-rod enthusiasts, that they will break water and even jump clear to take a lure, are not without foundation. They will, but it is only on occasion, with conditions at their best, and upon examination they also rise to a fly in grand style and give a sporty battle.

Sunday should see the peak of the present run, but that doesn't mean the end of this sport, for there will be four or five more runs, each one from five to eight days apart. In between, or with them will come the runs of herring and shad.

Somewhere around the last of the month and the run of rock will be in the upper river. Old rivermen are looking forward to a good year. It would be hard for them to tell just how they arrive at these conclusions, but they are never very far off. The first scattered ones have already started up. Quite a few having been caught off the point of the polo field and several as far up as Joe Fletchers. The majority of this striped bass run weighs from three-quarters to two pounds, but the big ons are in with them and the possibilities are unlimited. Once in a while they scale up to 20 and even 30 pounds.

There are many fine catches of channel cats coming from that deep water at Walkers Point. Most of them in the neighborhood of 2 pounds, but some going to 8 and 10 pounds.

Last year, there were caught in Maryland waters, 927,000 pounds of striped bass or rockfish, with a valut to commercial fishermen of $78,624. These figures do not include the two great hauls of nearly 100,000 pounds at Piney Point and Drum Point, that, because of improper icing, were dumped just outside Baltimore.

It is impossible to figure the value to commercial fishermen of State of Maryland, had they been left for the sports angler.

The New Jersey Fish and Game Commission distributed early in April 28,683,000 flounder fry in the Shrewsbury, Shark, Manasquan, Metedeconk and Toms rivers and in the tributaries of Barnegat Bay. These fish were secured from the Federal Bureau of Fisheries at Woods Hole, Mass. This policy of stocking the fry of other, as well as that of the flat fish will be continued, so that the increased thousands of anglers fishing the Jersey coast will be well supplied with what it takes to make a perfect fishing day. This years' fry are next years' flounders.

Many request have come in for additional trout streams in Maryland. There are many stocked by the State that will not carry fish through the summer. Of those there will be no mention. Three counties carry the best streams in the State—Garrett, Frederick and Washington. The latter two are less than two hours, drive, while Garrett is in western Maryland.

Garrett County: Savage River, Little Savage River, White Rock, Herrington Creek, Salt Block, Lost Land Run, Bear Creek, Laurel Run, Poplar Lick, Middle Fork, Crabtree Run, Big Run, Wolf Den Run, Pine Swamp Run, Schoolhouse Run, Spiker Run, Tolliver Run, Short Run, Folly Run, Battle Run, Rock Run, Sang Run, Hoyes Run, Buffalo Run, Miller Run, Casselman Branch and Cherry Creek. Last year this county had Pusley Run, Pleasant Run and Piney Run stocked with 3 and 4-inch brooks. Another year had best be given them before fishing.

Frederick County: Little Owens Creek, Tuscarora Creek (not the one this side of Frederick, but the one beyond), Little Catoctin Creek, Lake Royer, Bear Creek, High Run, Turkey Run and Little Cascade.

Washington County: Toonoloway Creek, Marsh Run, St. James Run, Little Antetiam, Beaver Creek and Dry Run.

Don't forget that in Virginia this year that all fish are keepers, regardless of size, and that in the Park area, only artificial lures are permissible, and that fishing is prohibited between sunset and sunrise. There is no fishing on the western slopes of the mountains. This cuts out three of the best trout streams in that area. Dry Run, Jeremiah Run and Cub Run.

Pollution legislation is now receiving attention in Congress. The Vinson bill, H. R. 2711, and Pfeifer bill, H. R. 3419, are before the House Committee on Rivers and Harbors. The Vinson bill is entirely inadequate. It provides no Federal authority to initiate action to stop pollution on coastal, navigable and interstate waters. It does not even authorize State compacts except as individually approved by Congress. Everything of real consequence it does is included in the Pfeifer bill.

The Pfeifer bill is very similar to the Lemeyan bill, which has already been widely publicized in Outdoor America, and provides effective control of pollution. Every possible support should be given it. Please write or wire your Congressmen, and the chairman of the House Rivers and Harbors Committee, Congressman Joseph J. Mansfield.

Roosevelt Reports His Arm In Great Shape for Opener

President Roosevelt, a husky right-hander, reported his pitching arm in great shape yesterday and promised to toss the first ball of the major league baseball season here Monday.

He laughingly told Owner Clark Griffith of Washington and President Ford Frick of the National League, according to the Associated Press, that he'd throw a strike to begin the Washington-Philadelphia American League game.

The Athletics probably will have two strikes on them before they start, for Washington has never lost a game when Mr. Roosevelt attended and remained throughout the contest. The Senators regard him as a good-luck fan.

Frick and Griffith, representing the American League, gave Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt gold-bordered league passes, good for the season. The President will have to earn his Annie Oakley by pegging a shiny, new ball in the general direction of the pitcher's box Monday.

It will be the fifth time he has performed this chore. He must continue for three more years to equal the eight-straight record of Woodrow Wilson.

Mr. Roosevelt's promise today was given almost 27 years to the day after William Howard Taft started the Presidential custom on April 14, 1910. Walter Johnson rewarded Taft by tossing a one-hit game against the Athletics. Every Chief Executive since Taft has attended inaugural contests.

Vice President Garner, just as enthusiastic a baseball rooter as Mr. Roosevelt, also will be on hand Monday.

For the American League, Griffith presented the President a tan-colored handbag as a gift to Mrs. Roosevelt. The President smilingly remarked that it would just match a dress Mrs. Roosevelt recently bought.

Spring Golf Play Is Set At Potomac

Field of 100 Expected to Seek Oliveri's Title April 26 to 29.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

The first of East Potomac's eight event tournament schedule for the public links golfers is slated April 26 to 29 over the downtown layout and will be a renewal of the annual spring tourney.

Harry Graham, manager, expects Defending Champion Andy Oliveri and a field of 100 to fill at least five flights. Every competitor will be assured of match play.

Other tourney dates to be filled by Graham for the pay-as-you-play golfers include the ladies championship, junior, the city public links championship, the midsummer tourney, downtown invitation event, and the turkey tournament that will wind up the schedule.

More than 40 golfers have signed up for the East Potomac Club's first team match of the season with the Glenwood team, of Richmond, Sunday, April 25, over the Virginia course.

The Chevy Chase Golf Club announced the annual invitation tournament for the Taft and Sherman trophies would again assess entrants not from the host club a $5 fee. It is slated May 12, 13 and 14 and is open to U. S. G. A. club members with a handicap of 14 or less. Entries close May 6 at 3 p. m.

Entries for the Woodmont Invitation tournament, May 4 to 7, inclusive, will close April 30. The twelfth renewal of the event will qualify four sixteens for match play. Home clubs or Wisconsin 1607 will accept entries. Course privileges will be extended on May 3 to participants.

Beaver Dam and Manor, among the Washington contingent, have entered the Maryland State Golf Association's annual spring handicap match play competition. The clubs will enter four-man teams in classes A, B and C.

Newsom Target At Mat Show

Buck Newsom might pitch the opening game for the Nats, but he did a lot of catching last night as the wrestlers at Turner's Arena took turns throwing each other into the blustering twirler's lap.

Laverne Baxter, the reformed villain, didn't live up to the press notices in pinning Wee Willie Davis in less than a half hour and the main-bout participants ran a poor second to the show-stealing semi-wind-up between Hank Barber and Cliff Olsen.

Barber was the winner after having his eyes gouged by peanut shells and what not by the terrible Swede. The boys left the ring, tripped all over the ringsiders, threw chairs and finally decided they better call it a draw after 30 minutes.

Big Buck, a ringside spectator, took more punishment than the grunt-and-groan artists and finally implored Baxter to call his shots after he stepped in Buck's jaw with one foot and his $10 fedora with the other. The Nat pitcher drew a big hand when introduced by Jimmy Lake.

Redskin Gridders Sign Vet, Rookie

A veteran tackle and a small college star who was a sensation in New England last year have been brought into the fold of the Washington Redskins, the management announced last night. They are Jim Barber, of Manteca, Calif., regular tackle for the last two seasons, and John Spirida, halfback of St. Anselm's College, of Manchester, N. H., which was undefeated in 1936.

Barber, 215 pounds and standing 6 feet 3, first gained gridiron fame at San Francisco University. Teaming at the tackle positions with massive "Turk" Edwards the last two years, he has been largely responsible for the fine defensive record of the Redskins. Spirida, who scales 195 and is 6 feet 1, was the outstanding player last fall for St. Anselm's, which held Holy Cross scoreless and won all of its other contests. Redskin scouts predict he'll make the major league grade, as did "Tuffy" Leemans and many other present professional stars who played with the lesser-known college teams.

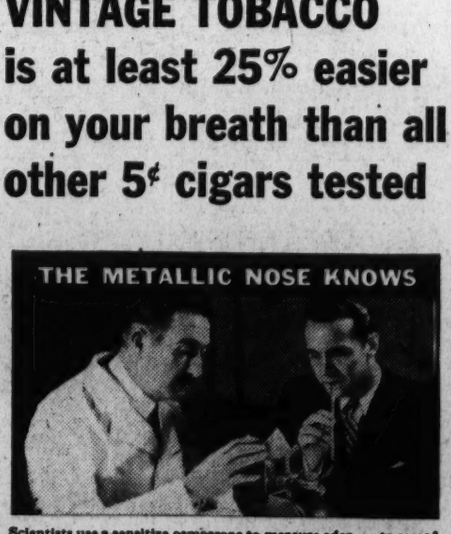
Tests show that VINTAGE TOBACCO is at least 25% easier on your breath than all other 5¢ cigars tested



Scientists use a sensitive osmoscope to measure odor . . . to record its intensity and lasting power. Ten different brands of 5¢ cigars were tested by this machine. White Owl was at least 25% easier on the breath than all the others. After 30 minutes, all trace of tobacco odor disappeared from the breath of White Owl smokers.

New scientific discoveries have shown White Owl's Vintage tobacco to be exceptionally low in substances that cause unpleasant tobacco breath. Tests with a delicate osmoscope prove this tobacco leaves less odor.

White Owl is a better cigar because it always has a Vintage-tobacco filler. Nature—not factory processing—made this tobacco exceptionally mild, mellow.

We maintain a vast crop-inspection system, the only known organization of its kind, to locate Vintage tobacco. Even in Vintage years, we classify all filler tobacco into seven grades—buy only tobacco of the quality of the top three for White Owls.

You'll favor their mellow mildness and rare good taste—and ladies will favor men who smoke them.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

That increased prices for farm products will not cure our agricultural difficulties, is the contention of Clarence R. Bitting, president, United States Sugar Corporation, and a visitor in Washington. The application of modern industrial methods to agricultural operations is bound to result in lower cost of production and hence benefit to the consumer and the producer. In support of this statement, Mr Bitting cited the results obtained in his own operation. Six years ago when he took over its plantations, they were in receivership, he reminded. In 1936 they paid dividends

During this period, he recalled, the agricultural operations he headed paid higher than average farm wages to American labor and yet produced sugar at a cost lower than that of the low-wage sugar producing areas supplying the needs of the United States

Citing the findings of the Brookings Institute in 1929 that more than 7,500,000 families were deficient in their food supply by upward of $2,500,000,000, and the more recent comment by President Roosevelt that fully a third of the people were ill-nourished. Mr. Bitting believes that the agricultural problem today is not overproduction but underconsumption.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively,
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Work Irregularly Lower in Less Active Trading; Bonds Improve.

New York, April 15.—This might as well have been July 15 in the middle of a heat wave for all the spirit that could be mustered in the stock market. Dealings involved only slightly more than 900,000 shares and the price changes were small and irregularly lower from start to finish. Bonds on the other hand were firm. July wheat lost 2⅜ cents at 122⅛ cents a bushel.

Financial skies were searched in vain for some fresh sign to indicate the coming weather. Neither in the direction of industrial news nor of Government management could anything new be found to strengthen or weaken existing views on the outlook. Opening dealings were small and without significant price changes. A small majority of the first prices were fractionally lower than the previous closings, and no tendency toward a general recovery took place up to the lunch hour.

Even the good cheer produced earlier this week by the numerous annual reports and estimates of first quarter earnings was lacking, because the day produced few important annual meetings. Rather time was given to make a reappraisal of prices on the basis of what had been learned about current earnings, and the results doubtless increased the caution on the buying side, although they produced no good reasons for selling stocks already acquired.

Many of the industrial standard stocks receded gently as the trading wore on, and it was only the occasional speculative favorite that was able to attract a following. Celanese was one such stock. It sold up a point or so to a new high price, although Industrial Rayon was a bit soft. Bulova ran up 2 points or more. Steel gradually ebbed, as did most in that group, and the motor list also was inclined to move backward.

Small fractions were chipped from most of the metal and oil shares. Celanese, Socony-Vacuum and Republic Steel made up about 10 per cent of total business. Northern Pacific advanced timidly on fairly large volume, but it was by no means a railroad market. Local traction issues were depressed.

Gains of 1 to 6 points were noted in Bulova, Cleveland Graphite, Lehman, Baldwin preferred, Union Bag, Smith-Corona, Timkin Roller and U. S. Industrial Alcohol. Principal losses were taken in General Outdoor Advertising, Associated Dry Goods second preferred, Byers preferred, Pittsburgh Steel and Southern Railway preferred.

Worrying.

That many bulls are by no means dead sure of their position is indicated by the flood of inquiries which have come to this column with respect to the name of the market analyst, quoted briefly a few days ago, who predicts a severe decline in stocks. Just now another well-known market prophet is circularizing the public with his view that a new boom in stocks is getting under way. That undoubtedly is what the public would like to believe, but the inquiry for details of the opposite view is so great as to uncover much underlying nervousness.

"Very rightly," says an editorial in the London Financial News, "Wall Street has chosen to disregard President Roosevelt's declaration about prices. The President's speech, indeed, has been interpreted as a sign of weakness rather than strength. It is evident that the New Deal economists fear the development of a boom situation—and that they have some reason for these fears—and have been sufficiently inculcated with the doctrines of Mr. Keynes to believe that the Federal Government should do something about it. But it is equally evident that in fact there is very little that the Federal Government can do, and the President's announcement shows that he realizes perfectly well that there is little that the Federal Government can do."

Looking Ahead.

As the official report for 1936 earnings are published, accompanied in many cases by estimates of earnings for first quarter this year and beyond, it becomes increasingly clear that many stocks are doing more to discount a bright future than they ordinarily do when governed only by the usual economic forces. Factors bearing extra weight at the moment are the heavy capital gains, taxes, the outlook for inflation, and the impossibility of finding adequate employment for money outside the stock market. Taking everything into consideration, current prices, based on a measurement of multiplying estimated first-quarter earnings by four and dividing that on a share basis into the price per share, many issues will be found to have gone far beyond the old-fashioned rule of thumb of ten times earnings as a proper calculation for stock prices. On last year's figures many stocks are selling at 40 times earnings, and on optimistic projection of first-quarter estimates the price may be 20 times or higher.

Tax Date.

Stock traders may have independently gone on a sort of sit-down strike as a tax protest. Whether a coincidence or not the dullness of the trading corresponded to the feelings of the fellow who was reminded today that he must dig up about as much to support an extravagant State government as it costs him to pay for the follies of the National Administration—and the preparation of the State tax form is the more complicated of the two.

Bituminous Production.

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended April 10 as approximately 5,850,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week; 1933, 7,392,000 tons; 1935, 5,573,000 tons.

WHAT POISON HAVE YOU FOUND ON THAT CARNATION, DOCTOR?
IT'S SOME NEW FORM OF CYANOGEN, WINSLOW-
- AND OUR TESTS SHOW ALL THE BLOSSOMS ON CAPTAIN HOLDING'S BALCONY ARE LOADED WITH IT!
I THOUGHT SO!
AT LAST THE PICTURE IS CLEAR -- TASMIA MUST HAVE SPRINKLED ALL THE FLOWERS WITH POISON IN COLORLESS, LIQUID FORM - HARMLESS UNTIL TOUCHED BY WATER ...
LAST EVENING IT RAINED ... CAPTAIN HOLDING STEPPED UPON HIS OPEN BALCONY, PICKED A DAMP CARNATION — AND MET HIS DEATH!
AND TASMIA, THE MURDERESS, IS STILL AT LARGE

FORCE Is the Issue!

THE SIT-DOWN STRIKE remains the big question-mark in the relationship between industry and labor. It has been declared illegal. Public opinion has been recorded in favor of further laws against it.

But how many Americans believe that force should be used in removing the sit-downers?

THAT IS THE QUESTION asked voters all over the Nation in the latest AMERICA SPEAKS poll.

Truce Reached In Rail Pension Act Argument

Doughton Introduces Bill Cutting $100,000,000 in Revenues for U. S.

By William V. Nessly.

Climaxing an Administration drive of more than three months to obtain agreement on a substitute railroad pension tax law that would end litigation over the old act, Robert L. Doughton, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, yesterday introduced a bill calling for new tax rates.

Though the measure deprives the Federal Treasury of some $100,000,000 of revenue which had been counted on in the budget, the Treasury was understood to have accepted it after previously having blocked enactment of a plan agreed to by the railroads and their employes. The Treasury protested that the tax rates proposed would not provide enough revenue to carry the pension load.

The Doughton bill calls for an income tax on each railroad employe's pay up to $300 a month, and an excise tax on the railroad to yield the same amount. The rate for the years 1937, 1938 and 1939 would be 2¾ per cent of the pay roll, the taxes together yielding 5 per cent of the rail pay roll.

For the succeeding three years the tax would be 3 per cent each on the employe and the carrier, for the next three years 3¼ per cent, for the next three years 3½ per cent and after 1948 it would remain at 3¾ per cent.

Protested by Morgenthau.

The rate in the old law, tied up in the courts in action brought by the carriers, is 3½ per cent, providing a total yield of 7 per cent of the rail pay roll. The rate in the plan agreed to by carriers and employes after long conferences, which were held at the request of President Roosevelt, was to start at 2 1-5 per cent and increase gradually until, in 12 years, it was to be 3½ per cent.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau protested that the new rates would not yield enough money to pay the pensions provided, in addition to providing for the refund of the taxes collected and impounded under the litigation. Conferences between experts of the Treasury, House and Senate leaders, and actuaries of the railroads, the rail unions and the Railroad Retirement Board have continued for several weeks in an effort to meet the Treasury objections.

Secretary Morgenthau said yesterday that with various groups in the conferences citing estimates of different actuaries up together "so their figures could be harmonized. Out of this procedure, he said, came two proposals, either of which was satisfactory to the Treasury.

Treasury Is Willing.

The Doughton bill was introduced a few hours after the Secretary of Treasury had made his statements. Presumably, the Treasury is willing for the tax rate to be cut in the next nine years below the present act's rate, since, after 12 years, the rate will exceed the existing one by one-fourth of 1 per cent.

The annual pay roll of the railroads, on which the tax is to be levied was taken at $2,200,000,000 in the negotiations. However, it was said that deductions to exempt pay of employes above $300 a month would probably reduce the amount actually taxable to about $2,000,000,000.

On this total, the new tax rate would yield some $110,000,000 a year from both employes and carriers. After 1948 the yield would be about $150,000,000 a year, and more as the annual pay roll increased.

The Doughton bill also provides that all tax money collected under the old law, prior to January 1 of this year shall be returned to the carriers and the employes. It refunds also three-fourteenths of the amount collected and impounded since January 1, that fraction denoting the difference between the old rate and the proposed one. The eleven-fourteenths will be used to pay the tax since the first of the year.

Paying From Appropriations.

The railroad union plan was the outgrowth of conferences, which opened January 7, after President Roosevelt had asked such action in letters to J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, and George M. Harrison, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives Association.

Several weeks ago the conferees announced their agreement, the proposal, in addition to cutting the tax rate, making provision for the carriers' private pension systems, costing the roads some $36,000,000 a year, being taken into the Federal system.

While the old act has been tied up in litigation, the Railroad Retirement Board has been paying pensions out of a Congressional appropriation. Enactment of a substitute law is expected to expedite the work of the board, since lack of cooperation by the roads, while their court fight was under way, in providing service records of employes, will be ended.

Chairman Doughton said his committee will consider the new bill next Wednesday.

Counterfeit Bonds Charge Holds Pair

The Federal Bureau of Investigation last night announced the arrest at Laredo, Tex., of Thomas J. and W. B. Dix on charges of interstate transportation of $80,000 of allegedly counterfeit bonds.

The Dixes used the securities, it was charged, to establish the Inter-Southern Refinery Co., Inc., in Texas last November. Banks and a private company received the bonds as collateral for loans which enabled the Dixes to secure the purchase price of the refinery and additional loans, the agents said. The bonds purported to be legal securities of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

Thomas J. Dix told the investigators that he and his brother obtained the bonds from an unidentified man at Chicago who "loaned them to us as an investment."

U. S. Treasury Boosts Buying Of Own Securities in March

current agitation for taking steps to bring the Federal budget into balance, either by decreasing expenditures or by seeking new means of revenue. The President Tuesday called on all department heads to curtail all expenditures not absolutely necessary during the remaining two and one-half months of this fiscal year.

The Treasury's announcement of the large purchase of its own securities caused general surprise. Though it was suspected the Treasury had gone into the market for larger purchases than usual during March, when its securities were under selling pressure, few thought the purchases would almost double the previous monthly record.

Usually these purchases, except in months which contain the quarterly income-tax payment dates—March, June, September and December—are less than $25,000,000. The securities are purchased by the Treasury for the account of trust funds, such as the retirement fund, the postal savings and more recently the social security funds.

It is necessary to go back to September, 1935, to find a month in which Treasury purchases of its own securities for these accounts were comparable to those of last month. Even in that month the total purchased was but $60,000,000. In September, 1936, such purchases totaled $47,000,000. Since then the totals have been $27,000,000 for October, $5,000,000 for November, $24,100,000 for December, $14,300,000 for January and $5,000,000 for February.

Holdings Increased.

Since the end of 1933 the Federal Reserve bank holdings of such securities remained at approximately $2,430,000,000. On April 4, however, the open-market committee of the Reserve System announced it was prepared to make open-market purchases of Government securities in order to exert influence in behalf of orderly conditions in the Government security market and to facilitate an orderly adjustment of member banks to the deposit-reserve requirements which become effective May 1.

In the first three days after that statement, the system purchased $29,000,000 of Government securities, and in the next week—that which ended Wednesday—it purchased $28,000,000 more, bringing its Government security portfolio to $2,487,000,000. All of its purchases during the last week were of bonds.

Each of the 12 Reserve banks increased its holdings of Government bonds during the week, but the largest purchaser was the New York Reserve Bank, with $10,684,000. Cleveland was second with an increase of $2,671,000, and Chicago was third with an increase of $2,617,000.

Although from a viewpoint of expanding credit the Reserve System purchases were very moderate, they possessed potential influence as a device for controlling the market. For instance, the total sales of Government bonds on the New York Stock Exchange during the week ended Wednesday was $11,780,000, or only $1,096,000 more than the purchases reported for the New York Reserve Bank.

Ethics Code Proposed.

By the Associated Press.

Leaders of the Investment Banker's Conference, a national organization of 1,710 securities dealers, proposed yesterday a code of ethics for its members.

The conference's executive committee said the rules are intended as self-regulation to supplement regulation by the Securities Commission.

They would cover transactions for the purchase or sale of securities "over the counter" and not on regular exchanges. Standards were suggested concerning information and advice to customers, commissions and other charges, and the use of money to influence transactions or publicity.

Means for hearing complaints against members and imposing penalties for violations of the rules, if adopted, also were proposed.

The committee said it would follow additional rules it expects the Securities Commission to adopt soon regarding the disclosure of customers by investment bankers of their interests as either brokers or dealers for their own accounts in transactions, discretionary accounts and investment advice.

James M. Landis, commission chairman, issued a statement complimenting the conference. He said:

"The field for effective work of this character designed to elevate standards of business conduct, to achieve self-discipline and to bring about a general recognition of the grave responsibilities of those engaged in the investment banking and securities business if extensive. I shall follow this phase of the work of the conference with keen interest."

Gold Moves to United States.

New York, April 15.—Bankers engaged $15,177,000 more gold in England today to join the tide of metal moving toward New York and into the United States Treasury's "inactive" gold fund.

The latest gold rush across the Atlantic was measured in the Federal Reserve System's weekly condition report, revealing an increase of $105,000,000 in the monetary gold stock. The total rose to the unprecedented figure of $11,697,000,000, a gain of nearly $1,500,000,000 over the comparable 1936 total.

to "the father of American democracy." It takes but a minimum of study, however, to reveal that the fireworks are man-made.

The trouble in St. Louis came about when irregularities were disclosed in the referendum to decide whether the city should add $7,500,000 of its own to the Federal Government's contribution of $22,500,000 for a colossal memorial to Jefferson along 37 square block of water front.

Subsequently a group of property owners, opposed to condemnation of their holdings—stores, factories, houses, etc.—in the huge tract, carried their fight into the courts. They succeeded in preventing, at least temporarily, the project from getting under way.

Today, although $7,250,000 in PWA funds has been made available, the memorial is still being held in abeyance while the dissenting property owners decide whether or not to press their court battle. To date the only Federal money actually spent has been on plans and engineers' salaries, none on land acquisition or construction.

While the St. Louis memorial enterprise is ten times as important, on a dollars and cents basis, as the movement under way here to establish a fitting monument in Washington to Jefferson, its complications have failed to arouse anywhere near the volume of public response as its Capital cousin.

The reason is not hard to find. There are several, in fact, but the main one probably is that a memorial in Washington is representative of the entire Nation's respect to one of its most famous sons, while St. Louis would be primarily a sectional affair.

In addition, the proposed $30,000,000 undertaking in Missouri involves the demolition of commonplace structures, while the fate of Washington's Japanese cherry trees hinges on the outcome of the other issue.

"The Japanese cherry trees in Potomac Park," says the office of National Capital Parks, "have gained through the United States as much fame and are as well known as those of Japan itself.

"Although the Potomac Park trees may lack some of the romance and old legends that flutter about those of old Nippon, they give delight and cheer not only to the people of Washington, but to hundreds of thousands of visitors who come annually to view their short-lived loveliness and revel in their beauty and fragrance."

Lending fuel to the controversy also are the selection of John Russell Pope as the architect by the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission without the holding of a competition, the commission's refusal to hold public hearings and make public its detailed plans for the project and the lack of unanimity among its members as to the site.

Right now the fight lies in the House Appropriations Committee, which may, by disapproving the $500,000 item in the second deficiency bill to start work immediately on the memorial, bring about a brand new start on the program to give the Capital its first memorial to Thomas Jefferson.

16 Are Indicted By Grand Jury
